Science Theme: Food Chains

FEATURE ARTICLE

A blue whale can be 82 to 105 feet long.
Ocean Food Chains
Krill are about two inches long. They look like tiny shrimp.
Big fish eat little fish. Little fish eat tiny fish. That is the way many people think of ocean food chains. But ocean food chains are not always so clear. They can be shorter or much longer than food chains on land. For example, the biggest animal on Earth lives in the ocean. That's the blue whale. It eats krill, one of the smallest animals.
Threats to Ocean Food Chains
Humans are the top predator in the ocean. People hunt many different kinds of fish. There is too much overfishing around the world. Many fish populations are now at very low levels. Large numbers of predators such as sharks have also been killed. Ocean food chains need their top predators. It is how they stay healthy. For example, sharks keep other populations from becoming too large.
SHARKS
Not all sharks are meat eaters. The basking shark and the whale shark eat plankton. The whale shark is the biggest shark and fish in the ocean. The basking shark swims with its mouth open. That way it takes in as much plankton as possible.

In My Opinion
Deep-sea exploration is very important. I think more scientists should be exploring the world's deep oceans.
The oceans cover two-thirds of the planet. But we have explored ten percent of them. It is a dangerous place. But it is our planet. It is worth exploring. We have robotic exploration on Mars. Why can't we send robots to explore the deep sea?
We may discover at the bottom of our oceans new sources of medicines or energy. We may find new kinds of life. Strange creatures that we never knew existed! We may not benefit from the deep-sea exploration immediately. But exploration is its own reward. We should learn all we can about our planet. It is reason enough to explore the deep sea. This is why I think we need to study more about the deepest parts of the world's oceans.
A changing climate also threatens ocean food chains. The oceans have become warmer. Now some plants and animals cannot adapt. They begin to die. Since 1950, 40% of ocean phytoplankton has disappeared. These plants are the base of the oceans' food chains. Without them, the chains may collapse.
Scientists know they need to learn much more about the oceans. There are many thousands of ocean plants and animals that no one knows about. They are all a part of the life of the oceans.

There's a Food Chain In Your Backyard!
There are many kinds of plants and animals in your backyard. All of these plants and animals depend on each other for food and energy. Green plants make their own food. Many animals like chipmunks and grasshoppers eat the plants. Bigger animals like birds, snakes, and hawks eat animals that eat plants. They all form a food chain right in your backyard.

Deserts are hot and dry. Yet plants grow there. Animals live there, too. These plants and animals have adapted to living in the desert. They are able to find enough food and water.
Food and water is limited in a desert. An animal may not be able to find food it usually eats. Sometimes the animal can find something else. Other times there may not be another choice.

A Grand Old FLAG
The American flag is a pretty piece of cloth. But it is more. It is an important symbol of the United States.
Americans are proud of their flag. They display the flag to show they are proud of their country. People say a pledge to the flag. They pledge their loyalty to the United States.
The flag is a symbol of freedom and justice. These are the principles Americans believe in. People have died defending them. We display the flag in ceremonies honoring those people.
People all over the world recognize the American flag. But the flag didn't always look the way it does today.
The Pledge of Allegiance
Francis Bellamy wrote the Pledge of Allegiance [uh LEE jens] in 1892. Allegiance means loyalty. Congress made it an official pledge in 1942. To say it, people put their right hands over their hearts. They look at the flag and recite the pledge. They do this at many important events.

The Statue of Liberty
The Statue of Liberty is a symbol of the United States. The statue stands for freedom.
Her flame is covered in gold.
Did You Know?
The statue's real name is "Liberty Enlightening the World." People also call her "Lady Liberty."
Her head is 17 feet 3 inches tall.
A Gift from France
France helped America win freedom from Great Britain. Édouard de Laboulaye was an important French citizen. He wanted to honor America. He asked the people of France to make a gift for the United States. The Statue of Liberty was their gift.
This says "July 4, 1776" in Roman numerals. The Declaration of Independence was signed on that date.
The statue is made of copper. Copper turns green over time.
A Perfect View
The Statue of Liberty stands in New York Harbor. She faces ships entering the harbor. Ellis Island is nearby. Ellis Island began receiving immigrants in 1892. Ships heading toward Ellis Island passed by Lady Liberty. The statue became a symbol of safety, freedom, and good fortune for immigrants.
A Colossal Statue
Frédéric Auguste Bartholdi was a French sculptor. He had an idea for a gift. It was a statue. Laboulaye raised money to build the statue. Bartholdi completed the statue in 1884. It took 14 years to build it.
Lady Liberty breaks through chains. This stands for the end of slavery.
The statue is 151 feet tall.

Work with your group to research and write about this question: What are some other important symbols of America?
1 Talk about places and things that stand for America. Here are some ideas:
Mount Rushmore
Great Seal
Bald Eagle
White House
2 Choose one. Work together to learn about it. Use books, magazines, and the Internet.
3 Write answers to these questions:
Where can you see it?
What does it look like?
What does it stand for?
What else is important about it?
4 Plan a puppet show about your symbol. For example, a puppet bald eagle could tell her puppet eaglets why they are symbols of America. Make your puppets out of old socks, markers, glue, and yarn.

AMAZING ADAPTATIONS
A polar bear lives in a desert. Does this make sense? No way! Polar bears do not belong in deserts. They are better adapted to colder environments.
An adaptation is a change in an organism over time. The change helps the species survive. Plants and animals have traits that help them survive in certain conditions. These are adaptations.
Adaptations can be structural. For example, the thickness of an animal's coat is an adaptation. A sandy desert is too hot for a polar bear. The bear's thick coat keeps it warm in the icy Arctic. Adaptations can be behavioral, too. The way an animal acts is an adaptation.
How adaptation happens is amazing. Scientists have studied adaptations. And they have guessed at how adaptations occur. Most think they form over hundreds or thousands of years.
Zebra's travel in herds to trick predators. It is difficult for a lion to pick out one zebra because in a group, all their stripes blend together.

Summary
Sharks are well adapted to their environments and a new type of shark might have adaptations that make it even better able to survive.

Comprehension Focus
CCSS.ELA-INTEGRATION OF KNOWLEDGE AND IDEAS.RI.4.8 Explain how an author uses reasons and evidence to support particular points in a text.

SECONDARY FOCUS
CCSS.SPEAKING & LISTENING.4.2 Paraphrase portions of a text aloud or information presented in diverse media and formats, including visually, quantitatively, and orally.

INTRODUCING THE TEXT

Read the article title, "Sharks Control These Waters!" and the first paragraph. The author makes a few points in the first paragraph. What are some of the points you noticed? (Sharks are really well adapted to their environment. And that their adaptations help them to hunt and reproduce and survive.) Yes, those are some of the points the author made. Now, let's listen for evidence the author includes that supports or connects to these points. Listen closely.

READING THE TEXT

Set the focus for reading, reminding students that as they listen, they should be aware of the author's points and the reasons or evidence the author chose to include. As you listen, keep the author's points in mind. Then we'll look for evidence that relates to these points or reasons for them. We've been practicing this. It helps us understand the points the author is making and the main focus of what we are reading or listening to. As I read this selection to you, think about the points we have already identified. Listen carefully for the evidence the author includes. I'll show you what I mean.

Pause where indicated in the text. Model finding evidence in the text that supports the author's points. Then complete the selection.
In the section I just read, the author says that scientists discovered a "special type of shark." As I read on, who heard evidence that supports this point? Why is the shark special? (Because it's a new kind of shark and it's rare.) Who will share an example of other evidence that explains why the shark is special? (It's special because it seems like its parents are two different kinds of sharks. So maybe that means that sharks are still adapting.) Great! Now let's keep reading and continue to listen for more evidence of the author's points.

DISCUSSING THE TEXT

Guide the discussion by soliciting another instance in which the author makes a point. Encourage students to share evidence they heard. Then discuss how that evidence supports the point.
At the end of this selection, the author makes the point that these hybrid sharks are better adapted to their environment than their parents. Did anyone hear any evidence that supports this point? (I heard that this new shark maybe can live in warmer and cooler waters, not just one or the other.) Tell us how this evidence supports the point. (These sharks can live in warmer and cooler waters, but its parents can only live in one or the other. So they are better adapted because they can live more places.)

Help students develop their understanding of the text by using evidence from across the text to explain a point.
I was thinking about the point that being able to survive in warmer and cooler waters makes the hybrid shark better adapted. What does it mean to be "better adapted"? (Being "better adapted" means that the hybrid has characteristics that help it to survive more easily.) Good listening! What else did you hear? (I heard climate change might cause the ocean temperatures to change. So this new shark can live in different temperatures. The reason could be so it survives this change. It will be able to hunt everywhere for food.) All that information came from different places in the text I read. You really needed to listen carefully to pick up all that information.

6 Grade 4 | Science Theme B | Adaptations

Sharks Control These Waters!

Sharks have been on Earth for thousands and thousands of years. They've existed even before there were dinosaurs roaming the earth! Scientists think that sharks have survived for such a long time because they are so well adapted to their environment. That means sharks have traits and characteristics that help them to live on. These adaptations allow them to hunt and reproduce with success. Special adaptions have enabled sharks to exist on Earth for so long.

Recently scientists have discovered a special type of shark living off the coast of Australia. It is special because it is a new type of shark. The shark is the result of mating between two other species of shark. It's rare for different types of sharks to interbreed. And if interbreeding occurs, it's exceptionally rare for the offspring to be strong enough to survive.

There is another reason why this new type of shark is special. Scientists have noticed that it has unique characteristics that may help it to be even better suited to its environment. What does this mean? Sharks might b… environments.

Grade 1, Volume 1

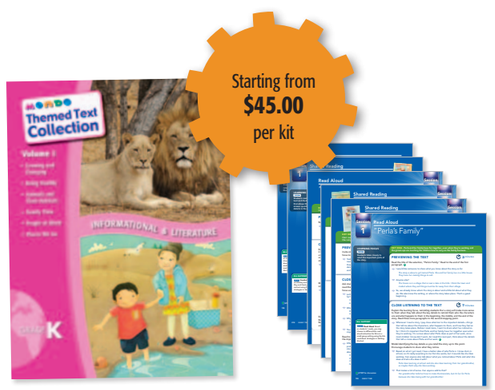
Set of lesson plans for each volume covers all Common Core reading standards for each grade!

What's in each Themed Text Collections volume?

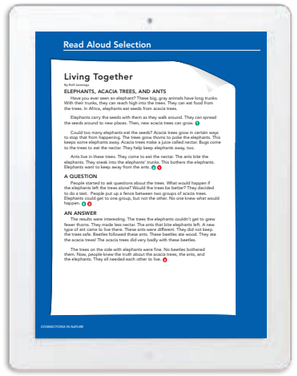
- 6 themes: 3 literature, 3 informational
- 3 texts per theme: 1 extended text, 2 short texts (18 texts in total)

Each whole group Themed Text Collection kit includes:

- 1 Themed Text Collection volume (6 themes)
- Big book format for Grades K–2
- Interactive whiteboard format for Grades 3–5
- Set of lesson plans per theme (2 sessions per text)
- Class set (24 students books) available as optional purchase



What's in each theme?



2 Read Aloud Selections (1 page each, available online)

Students listen as teachers read the text and model application of the learning focus.

100% of whole group texts are within or above Common Core "stretch" Lexile Bands.

1 Extended Shared Reading Text (4 pages)

Teachers scaffold students as they read closely, applying the same learning focuses and thought processes as in Read Aloud.

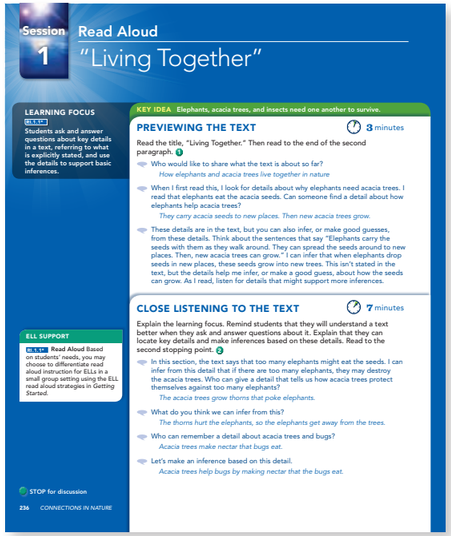
Connections in Nature
Plants and animals around the world, on land and in the sea, have unique characteristics and rely on each other in order to live and survive.
ESSENTIAL QUESTION
How are living things connected in nature?



Session 1
Read Aloud
"Living Together"
LEARNING FOCUS
RL.1.1 Students ask and answer questions about key details in a text, referring to what is explicitly stated, and use the details to support basic inferences.
KEY IDEA Elephants, acacia trees, and insects need one another to survive.
PREVIEWING THE TEXT
3 minutes
Read the title, "Living Together." Then read to the end of the second paragraph. 1
Who would like to share what the text is about so far?
How elephants and acacia trees live together in nature
When I first read this, I look for details about why elephants need acacia trees. I read that elephants eat the acacia seeds. Can someone find a detail about how elephants help acacia trees?
They carry acacia seeds to new places. Then new acacia trees grow.
These details are in the text, but you can also infer, or make good guesses, from these details. Think about the sentences that say "Elephants carry the seeds with them as they walk around. They can spread the seeds around to new places. Then, new acacia trees can grow." I can infer that when elephants drop seeds in new places, these seeds grow into new trees. This isn't stated in the text, but the details help me infer, or make a good guess, about how the seeds can grow. As I read, listen for details that might support more inferences.
CLOSE LISTENING TO THE TEXT
7 minutes
Explain the learning focus. Remind students that they will understand a text better when they ask and answer questions about it. Explain that they can locate key details and make inferences based on these details. Read to the second stopping point. 2
In this section, the text says that too many elephants might eat the seeds. I can infer from this detail that if there are too many elephants, they may destroy the acacia trees. Who can give a detail that tells us how acacia trees protect themselves against too many elephants?
The acacia trees grow thorns that poke elephants.
What do you think we can infer from this?
The thorns hurt the elephants, so the elephants get away from the trees.
Who can remember a detail about acacia trees and bugs?
Acacia trees make nectar that bugs eat.
Let's make an inference based on this detail.
Acacia trees help bugs by making nectar that the bugs eat.
ELL SUPPORT
ELL.1.1 Read Aloud Based on students' needs, you may choose to differentiate read aloud instruction for ELLs in a small group setting using the ELL read aloud strategies in Getting Started.
STOP for discussion

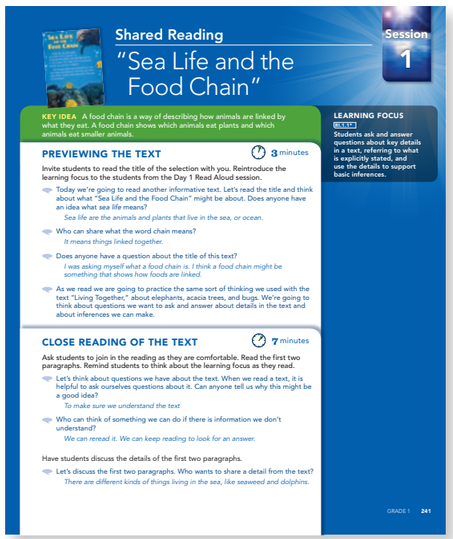
Read Aloud Lessons

- In Read Aloud, students listen as the teacher reads the text and models application of the Common Core learning focus.
- Stop signs within the text enable teachers to highlight specific sections for discussion to model the learning focus.

Shared Reading Lessons

Teachers support students as they read and apply the same learning focuses and thought processes for deep reading comprehension previously modeled in Read Aloud.



Shared Reading
"Sea Life and the Food Chain"
Session 1
KEY IDEA A food chain is a way of describing how animals are linked by what they eat. A food chain shows which animals eat plants and which animals eat smaller animals.
LEARNING FOCUS
RL.1.1 Students ask and answer questions about key details in a text, referring to what is explicitly stated, and use the details to support basic inferences.
PREVIEWING THE TEXT
3 minutes
Invite students to read the title of the selection with you. Reintroduce the learning focus to the students from the Day 1 Read Aloud session.
Today we're going to read another informative text. Let's read the title and think about what "Sea Life and the Food Chain" might be about. Does anyone have an idea what sea life means?
Sea life are the animals and plants that live in the sea, or ocean.
Who can share what the word chain means?
It means things linked together.
Does anyone have a question about the title of this text?
I was asking myself what a food chain is. I think a food chain might be something that shows how foods are linked.
As we read we are going to practice the same sort of thinking we used with the text "Living Together," about elephants, acacia trees, and bugs. We're going to think about questions we want to ask and answer about details in the text and about inferences we can make.
CLOSE READING OF THE TEXT
7 minutes
Ask students to join in the reading as they are comfortable. Read the first two paragraphs. Remind students to think about the learning focus as they read.
Let's think about questions we have about the text. When we read a text, it is helpful to ask ourselves questions about it. Can anyone tell us why this might be a good idea?
To make sure we understand the text
Who can think of something we can do if there is information we don't understand?
We can reread it. We can keep reading to look for an answer.
Have students discuss the details of the first two paragraphs.
Let's discuss the first two paragraphs. Who wants to share a detail from the text?
There are different kinds of things living in the sea, like seaweed and dolphins.

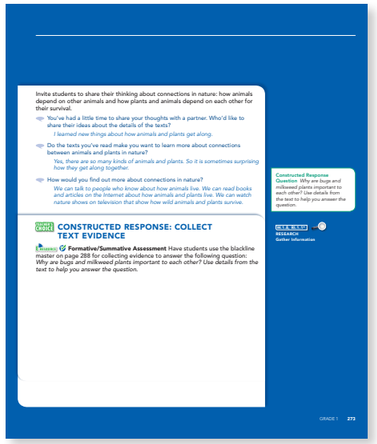
TEACHER'S CHOICE

Optional e-resources include theme-related blackline masters that support collecting evidence for and creating constructed responses.

Constructed Response



Invite students to share their thinking about connections in nature: how animals depend on other animals and how plants and animals depend on each other for their survival.
You've had a little time to share your thoughts with a partner. Who'd like to share their ideas about the details of the texts?
I learned new things about how animals and plants get along.
Do the texts you've read make you want to learn more about connections between animals and plants in nature?
Yes, there are so many kinds of animals and plants. So it is sometimes surprising how they get along together.
How would you find out more about connections in nature?
We can talk to people who know about how animals live. We can read books and articles on the Internet about how animals and plants live. We can watch nature shows on television that show how wild animals and plants survive.
CONSTRUCTED RESPONSE: COLLECT TEXT EVIDENCE
Formative/Summative Assessment Have students use the blackline master on page 288 for collecting evidence to answer the following question: Why are bugs and milkweed plants important to each other? Use details from the text to help you answer the question.
Constructed Response Question Why are bugs and milkweed plants important to each other? Use details from the text to help you answer the question.

Score
288 CONNECTIONS IN NATURE

Let's share the main points of the selection.
Milkweed is necessary for certain kinds of insects. Insects are necessary for milkweed plants.
What reasons does the author give about why milkweed plants are necessary for bugs?
Some bugs eat only parts of milkweed plants. Other insects live on or hide in milkweed plants.
Who wants to tell the reasons the author gives about why bugs are necessary for milkweed plants?
When bugs move milkweed seeds, new milkweed plants may grow.
Guide students in discussing why they should carefully look at pictures and captions when they read a text.
When we read the text, we looked carefully at the picture at the bottom and its caption. Do you think pictures and captions help readers understand the text better?
Yes, it helps to see pictures of what you're reading about, especially if we're reading about something new.
How do captions help readers?
If readers just look at the pictures, they may not know what they show. Captions make it clear what the pictures show.
You seem to have a good understanding now of why milkweed and bugs are important to each other.
CONSTRUCTED RESPONSE: WRITE TO SOURCE
Formative/Summative Assessment Have students continue using the blackline master on page 288 for collecting evidence as they reread the text. Then ask them to finalize their thoughts and use the blackline master on page 289 to write their own response to the following question: Why are bugs and milkweed plants important to each other? Use details from the text to help you answer the question.
GRADE 1 275

Constructed Response: Write to Source
Read "What to Do" below. Then use the evidence you collected to write your answer on the writing lines. You can use the back of this sheet or an extra page for your work.
What to Do

The Canada lynx is a type of wildcat that also lives in parts of Alaska, Canada, and some northern U.S. states.
Glacier National Park in Montana is home to goats, grizzlies, bald eagles, and other mountain mammals and birds.
NORTHERN MOUNTAIN STATES
Idaho, Montana, and Wyoming are the northernmost states in the Mountain region. There are still a few rivers of ice on the Rocky Mountains called glaciers. These glaciers are located in Montana and Wyoming.
These northern Mountain states host a variety of interesting wildlife. Some great places to see this wildlife—and enjoy stunning mountain views—are the many sprawling national parks in the Rocky Mountain region.
Glacier National Park is in northern Montana. It is home to more than 260 species of birds. Bald eagles and peregrine falcons nest in the park's craggy rocks. More than 66 species of mammals also live there. Chipmunks, squirrels, rabbits, marmots, and other small mammals scurry on the rocky mountainsides.
Larger mammals also roam the park. They include goats and deer. Grizzly bears hunt and gather food. There are only about 900 grizzlies left in all of North America. Glacier National Park is home to about 300 of them. The Canada lynx is another rare animal that calls the park home.

A Cake for My Friend
Today is my best friend's birthday!
She loves carrots.
So I made her a carrot cake.
First, I mixed flour and sugar.
Then, I added lots of carrots.
Mom baked the cake in the oven.
When it was done, I let the cake cool.
Then I stuck four carrots on top of the cake.
I carried it to the barn.
"Happy birthday, friend!"
Crunch! My pony liked her cake very much.

Reading

Key Idea
Book synopsis provides background about each text.

Close Reading
Teacher prompts promote daily text-based conversations.

Organized Standards
The first read focuses on the author's message, followed by craft and text comparison.

Response to Text
Constructed response questions are included for each text.

Writing

Performance Task
Informative, narrative, or opinion writing is a part of each theme.

Writing Process
Students focus on prewrite, draft, revise, edit, and publish.

Planning Organizers
A variety of graphic organizers and sample writing plans are provided.

Constructed Response
Support for modeled and shared practice is a part of each theme.

Day 9
Shared Reading
It's a Revolution!
LEARNING FOCUS
RI.1.1 Students read closely to ask and answer questions about key details in a text, referring to what is explicitly stated and using details to support inferences.
KEY IDEA In the time leading up to the American Revolution, colonists needed to spread news and communicate with each other. They did this primarily through newspapers that were eagerly read and shared throughout the colonies.

PREVIEWING THE TEXT (pages 7–10) 3 minutes
Preview the title page together and invite students to read the title with you.
Today we're going to read a new text. Let's read the title together. . . . Who can tell what we'll read about in this text?
I think it's going to be about the American Revolution.
I'm curious what we'll learn about from this text.
Reintroduce the learning focus from the recent read aloud session.
Remember, when we read the text titled "The Declaration of Independence," we asked ourselves questions and looked for answers in the text. This strategy helped us understand an informational text. As we read parts of this text today, think of questions you have. We'll find the answers by looking in the text and maybe making some inferences.
CLOSE READING OF THE TEXT 7 minutes
Ask students to join in the reading when they feel comfortable. Read the heading on page 7 together and then read to the end of page 8. Remind students to think about the learning focus as they read along with you.
Let's read the heading on page 7 together. . . . Who can think of a question about this?
What do newspapers have to do with the American Revolution?
Let's keep reading to the end of page 8 to see how that question is answered.
Lead students in sharing their questions and finding answers in the text.
Did we find the answer to our question about what newspapers have to do with the American Revolution?
Yes. Newspapers were how colonists found out what was going on in the world. When England made new taxes, the colonists found out about them by reading the newspaper.
Can you point to a specific place in the text that told you that?
On page 7, it says, "When England passed laws to tax the colonists, newspapers spread the word."

Navigate Literacy Instruction with Ease One Theme at a Time...

Each theme is divided into two cycles of instruction that focus on critical reading and writing standards to help your students become college and career ready.

For each instructional cycle, Days 1–6 and 7–14, there are three main learning focuses for reading (total of six).

Each cycle includes one Read Aloud and two Shared Readings—one Extended Text and one Short Text.

Students transfer and apply whole group learning focuses to leveled text on other topics.

Short, consistent daily sessions ensure that students are grounded in foundational skills and word recognition.

There are two main learning focuses for writing for each instructional cycle taught on Days 1–4 and 5–15.

Theme 1
Animals and Their Environments
THEME AT A GLANCE
Days 1–6 Learning Focuses
RI.2.1 Ask and answer such questions as who, what, where, when, why, and how to demonstrate understanding of key details in a text.
RI.2.4 Determine the meaning of words and phrases in a text relevant to a grade 2 topic or subject area.
RI.2.9 Compare and contrast the most important points presented by two texts on the same topic.
Days 7–14 Learning Focuses
RI.2.1* Ask and answer questions about key details in a text, referring to what is explicitly stated in the text and using the details to support inferences.
RI.2.5* Describe the overall structure to establish what/why, how the order of events, and what/how contribute to the understanding of key concepts in a text.
RI.2.7 Explain how specific images contribute to and clarify a text.
Day 15
Publish & Present
W.2.6 With guidance and support from adults, use a variety of digital tools to produce and publish writing, including in collaboration with peers.
SL.2.4 Tell a story or recount an experience with appropriate facts and relevant, descriptive details, speaking audibly in coherent sentences.
Students spend the instructional day using their technology and speaking & listening skills to present their opinion performance tasks.
SL.2.5 Create audio recordings of stories or poems; add drawings or other visual displays to stories or recounts of experiences when appropriate to clarify ideas, thoughts, and feelings.
SL.2.6 Produce complete sentences when appropriate to task and situation in order to provide requested detail or clarification.

Shared Reading
"Desert Living"
Day 3
KEY IDEA Desert animals must use as little water as they can, find ways to stay cool, and eat anything they can find. Examples of desert animals include camels, roadrunners, and kangaroo rats.
PREVIEWING THE TEXT 3 minutes
Invite students to read the title and author of the selection with you. Reintroduce the learning focus from the Day 1 read aloud session.
Today we're going to read another nonfiction text. Let's read the title and author's name together. . . . As we read, we are going to practice the same question and answer technique that we used with "Where Animals Live." We're going to pay close attention to key details by asking questions and looking for answers in the text.
CLOSE READING OF THE TEXT 7 minutes
Ask students to join in the reading as they are comfortable. Reread the title and read the first page together. Remind students to think about the learning focus as they read.
Let's think of who, what, where, when, why, and how questions about the text. I thought of this question: "What is a desert?" Who can find the answer to the question in the text?
It's a place that's very hot during the day and very cold at night. Not many plants grow there and not much rain falls. It's rocky and sandy.
Who can think of a where or how question and find the answer in the text?
How much of Earth is made up of deserts? The text says that they cover a third of Earth.
Who can share another question and answer on this part of the text?
How do animals live in a desert? They have to be strong because they might go without water for days or weeks. They also might spend hours in the sun without shade.
Read to the end of the page 7. Encourage students to keep thinking of questions and answers about key details as they read.
Let's read about animals that live in the desert. Read along with me through page 7. If you think of a question, keep it in mind, and we'll talk about it after we finish reading.

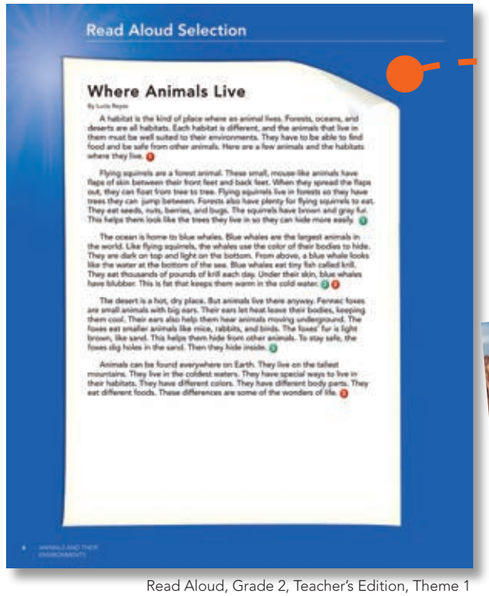
Captivating Texts to Model and Scaffold Each Standard in a Predictable Sequence

Utilizing one Read Aloud and two Shared Reading texts, teachers guide students through focus standards using the gradual release model, scaffolding students to independence while building knowledge.

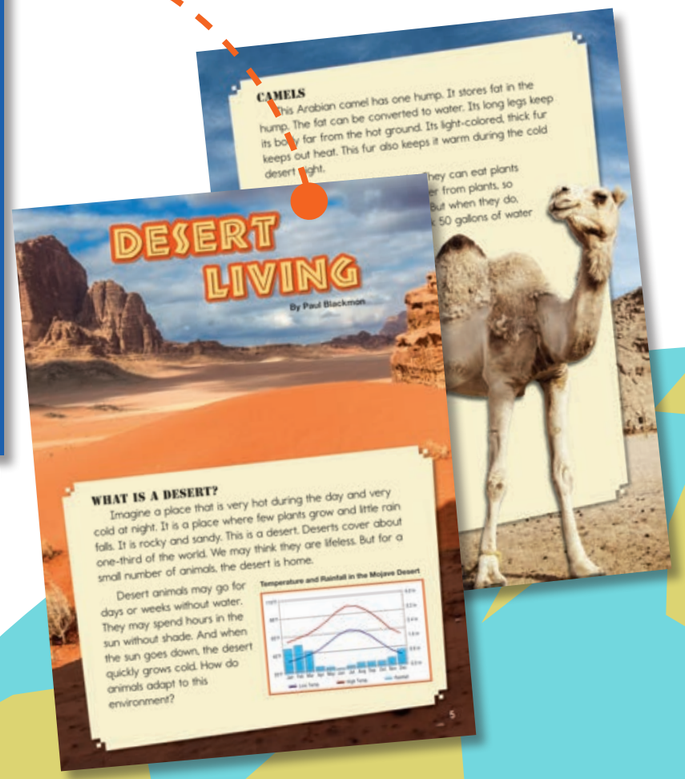
Read Aloud
Each cycle starts with a Read Aloud. Students listen as teachers read the text and model learning focuses.



Read Aloud Selection
Where Animals Live
By Lucia Reyes
A habitat is the kind of place where an animal lives. Forests, oceans, arid deserts are all habitats. Each habitat is different, and the animals that live in them must be well suited to their environments. They have to be able to find food and be safe from other animals. Here are a few animals and the habitats where they live.
Flying squirrels are a forest animal. These small, mouse-like animals have flaps of skin between their front feet and back feet. When they spread the flaps out, they can float from tree to tree. Flying squirrels live in forests so they have trees they can jump between. Forests also have plenty for flying squirrels to eat. They eat seeds, nuts, berries, and bugs. The squirrels have brown and gray fur. This helps them look like the trees they live in so they can hide more easily.
The ocean is home to blue whales. Blue whales are the largest animals in the world. Like flying squirrels, the whales use the color of their bodies to hide. They are dark on top and light on the bottom. From above, a blue whale looks like the water at the bottom of the sea. Blue whales eat tiny fish called krill. They eat thousands of pounds of krill each day. Under their skin, blue whales have blubber. This is fat that keeps them warm in the cold water.
The desert is a hot, dry place. But animals live there anyway. Fennec foxes are small animals with big ears. Their ears let heat leave their bodies, keeping them cool. Their ears also help them hear animals moving underground. The foxes eat smaller animals like mice, rabbits, and birds. The foxes' fur is light brown, like sand. This helps them hide from other animals. To stay safe, the foxes dig holes in the sand. Then they hide inside.
Animals can be found everywhere on Earth. They live on the tallest mountains. They live in the coldest waters. They have special ways to live in their habitats. They have different colors. They have different body parts. They eat different foods. These differences are some of the wonders of life.

Read Aloud, Grade 2, Teacher's Edition, Theme 1

Shared Reading: Extended Text
Then, during Shared Reading of an extended text, teachers support students as they read and apply the same learning focuses and thought processes for deep reading comprehension as previously modeled in Read Aloud.



CAMELS
This Arabian camel has one hump. It stores fat in the hump. The fat can be converted to water. Its long legs keep its body far from the hot ground. Its light-colored, thick fur keeps out heat. This fur also keeps it warm during the cold desert night.

DESERT LIVING
By Paul Blackman
WHAT IS A DESERT?
Imagine a place that is very hot during the day and very cold at night. It is a place where few plants grow and little rain falls. It is rocky and sandy. This is a desert. Deserts cover about one-third of the world. We may think they are lifeless. But for a small number of animals, the desert is home.
Desert animals may go for days or weeks without water. They may spend hours in the sun without shade. And when the sun goes down, the desert quickly grows cold. How do animals adapt to this environment?
Temperature and Rainfall in the Mojave Desert

ROADRUNNERS
The roadrunner is a bird that hardly ev runs quickly. It can run 20 miles per hour!
animals, roadrunners eat
both plants and animals.
They mostly eat bugs, but they also eat seeds, snakes, and small animals. They get water from what they eat.
After a cold night, they warm up by spreading their feathers out. Then the sun can reach their skin.
LIZARDS
Lizards are animals with thick skin ar cold-blooded. This means their blood is air around them. Lizards must be careful not to get too hot or cold. In the desert, lizards often hide in the ground during the day.
They come out at night to find food. Many desert animals do the same thing.
KANGAROO RATS
Kangaroo rats have large back legs and small front legs. They dig holes in the ground called burrows. They stay in their burrows most of the day and come out to look for seeds at night. They also store seeds in their burrows so they have food during the winter. Kangaroo rats get all their water from the seeds they eat. They do not need to drink water.
ADAPTATIONS
Many animals survive in the desert. They have all adapted to living here. These animals use as little water as they can. Many stay underground during the hot day. Most eat anything they can find. Their bodies have special features that help them survive. The desert is a hard place to live. Over time, these animals have adapted to it.
The kangaroo rat is a type of rat. It is not a kangaroo. But kangaroo rats do hop like kangaroos!

Finally, teachers support students in another opportunity to practice the same learning focuses as they closely read and discuss this short text.

The Amazing Mimic Octopus
By Jaime Alvarado
Have you ever mimicked your friends? To mimic is to talk or act like other people. Some animals can mimic, too. They "pretend" to be other animals. A mimic octopus is a sea animal with eight legs. It can mimic many other sea animals, like fish and snakes.
This mimic octopus is just being itself.
The octopus can change the color of its skin. It can look like a sponge or a rock. It can change its body shape. It moves its legs to make different animal shapes. Then the octopus acts like the other animal. It moves its body in the same way.
The octopus does this to scare predators away. It can look like an enemy, such as a jellyfish. Some sea animals are afraid of jellyfish because they sting. The octopus pretends to be a jellyfish. Then other animals do not attack it. That's one smart octopus!
This photo chart shows a mimic octopus in action as three different sea animals!

A Thoughtfully Organized Structure Helps You Develop Analytical Readers

Lesson plans for Read Aloud and Shared Reading address and integrate more rigorous 21st century literacy standards (reading, writing, speaking, listening, and language) so that students can synthesize and apply critical reading and writing standards in their learning.

Focused, thought-provoking conversations and questions encourage rich, text-based discussions that require students to cite text evidence.

Shared Reading (Continued)
WORD RECOGNITION/STUDY
RF.2.3, 3.a, 3.d Expand students' vocabulary skills with a discussion of compound words. Then focus on the word roadrunner on page 7. Discuss the two smaller words, road and runner, that make up this word. Elicit from students that these words can be used to determine the meaning of the compound.
Discuss using questions and answers to demonstrate understanding of key details.
Who'd like to share questions they thought of about the animals on pages 6 and 7?
Why does a camel have a hump on its back?
Who can find the answer in the text?
The humps store fat.
Does anyone else have a question and answer about another desert animal?
How do roadrunners get water? I found the answer on page 7. It says they get water from the plants and animals they eat. I have one too. What do lizards do during the day? On page 7 it says they hide in the ground. I think that's so they don't get too hot.
DISCUSSING THE TEXT
10 minutes
Read the last page of the text with students. Facilitate a discussion in which students ask and answer questions about key details. Help students understand that asking questions and finding answers in the text can help them understand what they read.
SL.2.1 COMPREHENSION Ask and Answer Questions
Who'd like to share questions about key details on the last page?
What do kangaroo rats use their burrows for?
Let's look in the text to find details that answer the question.
They use their burrows to keep out of the sun. They store seeds in their burrows to have food in the winter.
This question asks about key details. By looking for the answer in the text, we can understand how kangaroo rats live in deserts.
Invite students to discuss details in the text. Explain that they can ask a speaker questions to clarify or gather information or to deepen their understanding.
Let's discuss the key details in the text. Listen carefully to what each speaker says. If you need more information, ask a question. Then share your own ideas with the group. Who wants to begin by telling us some key details?
The desert is a dry, rocky, sandy place. Desert animals have adapted to the desert and learned ways to survive there. Some stay out of the sun in the day by digging holes. They look for food at night. Kangaroo rats and lizards do this. Camels store fat in their humps to give them energy. Roadrunners slow down their hearts at night and warm up in the sun.
Invite students to talk about the key details they selected. Encourage them to ask each other questions to clarify what they mean. Encourage them to discuss answers to questions using text evidence.

CONNECTING TO THE THEME

Engage students in a conversation about the theme, Animals and Their Environments, and the Essential Question, How do different animals live in different habitats? Discuss how the two texts you've read relate to the theme a the Essential Question. Encourage students to discuss how each animal is able to survive in its environment.

- We've been talking about how animals are well suited to the habitats they live in as we've read through this theme. I would like for us to think and talk together about the animals in "Where Animals Live" and "Desert Living." Let's discuss why fennec foxes, camels, roadrunners, lizards, and kangaroo rats are well suited to deserts.

Invite students to share their ideas. Encourage them to compare ways animals deal with desert heat.

- Who'd like to share ways animals deal with the desert heat in these two texts?
  In "Where Animals Live," I noticed that the fennec fox uses its ears to keep cool. In "Desert Living," camels use their long legs and thick fur to keep out the heat.
- We can see that the desert camels and foxes both have body parts that help them deal with the heat. Who can name another way some desert animals deal with the heat?
  Lizards and kangaroo rats stay underground during the day.

Grade 2 Teacher's Edition, Theme 1

All Shared Reading texts include an optional constructed response question, for which students collect evidence on the first day with each text.

At the end of each lesson, What's Next? provides suggestions for Small Group Reading, Foundational Skills, and Writing that easily work within your literacy framework.

In subsequent readings of a text, students build on the key idea and simultaneously consider additional learning focuses.

Point-of-use vocabulary instruction helps students understand words in context while building knowledge about word relationships, shades of meaning, and figurative language.

"Desert Living"

Day 4

RETURNING TO THE TEXT 3 minutes

Encourage students to share their thoughts about "Desert Living." Then explain the learning focuses for this session.

- Today we're going to reread the text together. Who will remind us what "Desert Living" was mostly about?
  It tells how camels, roadrunners, lizards, and kangaroo rats can live in a desert. It tells how they can live with hot days, cold nights, few plants, and little water.
- As we read the text today, we'll focus on the meanings of words. We will also ask questions to help us compare and contrast "Desert Living" and "Where Animals Live." We'll find answers in the texts to support our ideas.

CLOSE READING OF THE TEXT 7 minutes

Ask students to join in the reading as they are ready. Read the first two pages of the text together. Remind them to think about the learning focuses as they read along.

- As we read the text together, notice if there are any words or phrases you are unsure of.
  I'm not sure of tough on page 6.
- Let's begin to figure out what the word means by reading the text around it for clues. It says that camels eat plants with sharp needles. Who can tell what might happen to your mouth if you ate something with sharp needles?
  I could get cut.
- A camel's mouth doesn't get cut by sharp needles. A tough mouth is one that isn't easily cut. We read about lizards on page 7. Lizards have tough skin. Tough means "not easily cut."

Read page 7 together. Then compare and contrast important points made in "Desert Animals" and "Where Animals Live."

- One point made in "Where Animals Live" is how animals' colors help them hide and keep them safe from other animals. Who can share what they notice about the colors of animals in "Desert Living"?
  I can see in the photos that the camel, roadrunner, and lizard are the same color as the ground.
- What question and answer might we use to compare these two texts?
  How are the animals in the two texts alike? The colors of all the animals help them hide and keep them safe.

Scaffold Writing with Confidence through Constructed Response and Theme-Based Performance Tasks

Themes are divided into two cycles, each focusing on one type of writing: constructed response, and writing process with a themed-based performance task or research project. Teachers focus on four writing standards per theme, modeling and supporting students until they reach independence.

21ST CENTURY LITERACY STANDARDS

Explicit lessons for modeled and shared writing help students learn how to synthesize their understanding of texts and effectively write a constructed response.

LEARNING FOCUS
Introduce or help students recall characteristics of informative texts, in which a topic is introduced, facts and definitions are used to develop points, and a concluding statement or section is provided.
DAY 1 OVERVIEW
Introduce the theme, Animals and Their Environments, and the Essential Question, How do different animals live in different habitats? Discuss what a habitat or environment is.
In the text we read today, we learned about three habitats, or environments, where animals live. Let's talk about what a habitat is.
It is a place where an animal lives. Animals find food and stay safe in their habitat.
An environment is the place in the natural world where plants and animals live. The words habitat and environment are synonyms—they mean almost the same. We'll use both words in this theme. We read about some animals that are well suited to their environments. Who has some thoughts?
Blue whales are well suited to an ocean environment because the color of their bodies allows them to hide in water. They find krill there. They have blubber that keeps them warm in cold, ocean waters.
In the texts we read over the next couple of weeks, we'll be thi

Informative texts tell facts about a topic. Begin by stating the topic. Then give facts and definitions that develop points about the topic. Finally, end with a strong sentence or paragraph that tells what the text is about.

On Days 1 and 2 teachers model how to respond to a constructed response question. They then scaffold learning with opportunities for shared practice on Days 3 and 4.

Students collect evidence from one or two texts to support their independent written responses.

The Structure and Support You Want to Teach Essential Writing Elements

Through modeled and shared writing students learn the writing process by completing a performance task, based on each informational or literary theme. A clear learning focus for each daily writing lesson helps you navigate the writing block with confidence.

21ST CENTURY LITERACY STANDARDS

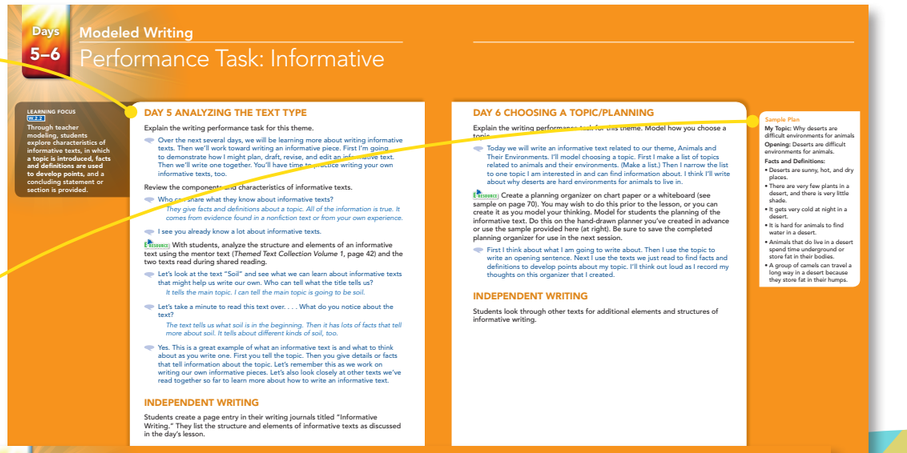
To complete each performance task, students analyze and research texts explored in whole group reading.

Modeled Writing

Teachers and students analyze the text type for each theme using the mentor text included in the Themed Text Collection.

A graphic organizer and sample writing plan supports teachers in modeling the planning process.

Sample teacher language and text specific tips provide clear support for drafting revising and editing. Suggestions for independent writing are included for each day.



Days 5–6
Modeled Writing
Performance Task: Informative

LEARNING FOCUS
W.2.5, W.2.8
Through teacher modeling, students explore characteristics of informative texts, in which a topic is introduced, facts and definitions are used to develop points, and a concluding statement or section is provided.

DAY 5 ANALYZING THE TEXT TYPE
Explain the writing performance task for this theme.
- Over the next several days, we will be learning more about writing informative texts. Then we'll work toward writing an informative piece. First I'm going to demonstrate how I might plan, draft, revise, and edit an informative text. Then we'll write one together. You'll have time to practice writing your own informative texts, too.

Review the components and characteristics of informative texts.
- Who can share what they know about informative texts?
  They give facts and definitions about a topic. All of the information is true. It comes from evidence found in a nonfiction text or from your own experience.
- I see you already know a lot about informative texts.

Create a planning organizer on chart paper or a whiteboard (see sample on page 70). With students, analyze the structure and elements of an informative text using the mentor text (Themed Text Collection Volume 1, page 42) and the two texts read during shared reading.
- Let's look at the text "Soil" and see what we can learn about informative texts that might help us write our own. Who can tell what the title tells us?
  It tells the main topic. I can tell the main topic is going to be soil.
- Let's take a minute to read this text over. . . . What do you notice about the text?
  The text tells us what soil is in the beginning. Then it has lots of facts that tell more about soil. It tells about different kinds of soil, too.
- Yes. This is a great example of what an informative text is and what to think about as you write one. First you tell the topic. Then you give details or facts that tell information about the topic. Let's remember this as we work on writing our own informative pieces. Let's also look closely at other texts we've read together so far to learn more about how to write an informative text.

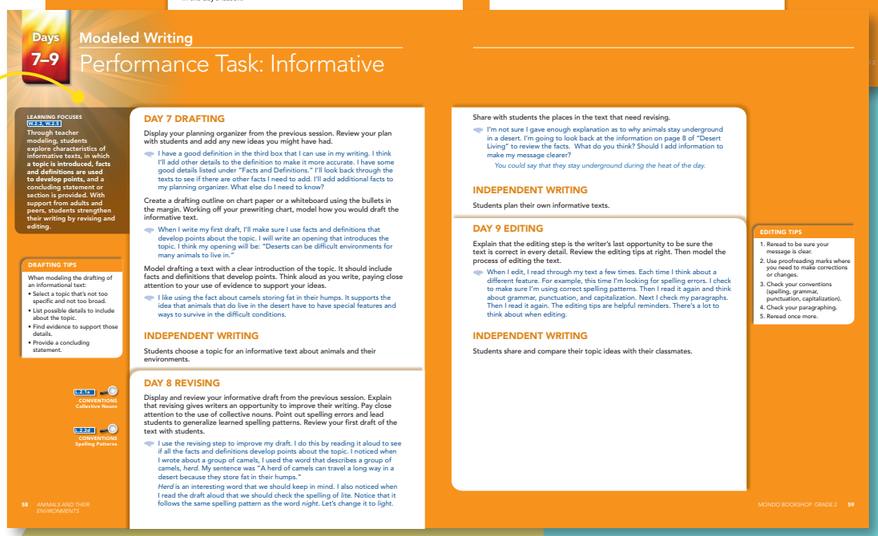
INDEPENDENT WRITING
Students create a page entry in their writing journals titled "Informative Writing." They list the structure and elements of informative texts as discussed in the day's lesson.

DAY 6 CHOOSING A TOPIC/PLANNING
Explain the writing performance task for this theme. Model how you choose a topic.
- Today we will write an informative text related to our theme, Animals and Their Environments. I'll model choosing a topic. First I make a list of topics related to animals and their environments. (Make a list.) Then I narrow the list to one topic I am interested in and can find information about. I think I'll write about why deserts are hard environments for animals to live in.

Create a planning organizer on chart paper or a whiteboard (see sample on page 70). You may wish to do this prior to the lesson, or you can create it as you model your thinking. Model for students the planning of the informative text. Do this on the hand-drawn planner you've created in advance or use the sample provided here (at right). Be sure to save the completed planning organizer for use in the next session.
- First I think about what I am going to write about. Then I use the topic to write an opening sentence. Next I use the texts we just read to find facts and definitions to develop points about my topic. I'll think out loud as I record my thoughts on this organizer that I created.

Sample Plan
My Topic: Why deserts are difficult environments for animals
Opening: Deserts are difficult environments for animals.
Facts and Definitions:
- Deserts are sunny, hot, and dry places.
- There are very few plants in a desert, and there is very little shade.
- It gets very cold at night in a desert.
- It is hard for animals to find water in a desert.
- Animals that do live in a desert spend time underground or store fat in their bodies.
- A group of camels can travel a long way in a desert because they store fat in their humps.

INDEPENDENT WRITING
Students look through other texts for additional elements and structures of informative writing.



Days 7–9
Modeled Writing
Performance Task: Informative

LEARNING FOCUSES
W.2.5, W.2.8
Through teacher modeling, students explore characteristics of informative texts, in which a topic is introduced, facts and definitions are used to develop points, and a concluding statement or section is provided. With support from adults and peers, students strengthen their writing by revising and editing.

DRAFTING TIPS
When modeling the drafting of an informational text:
- Select a topic that's not too specific and not too broad.
- List possible details to include about the topic.
- Find evidence to support those details.
- Provide a concluding statement.

L.2.1.f CONVENTIONS Collective Nouns
L.2.2.e CONVENTIONS Spelling Patterns

DAY 7 DRAFTING
Display your planning organizer from the previous session. Review your plan with students and add any new ideas you might have had.
- I have a good definition in the third box that I can use in my writing. I think I'll add other details to the definition to make it more accurate. I have some good details listed under "Facts and Definitions." I'll look back through the texts to see if there are other facts I need to add. I'll add additional facts to my planning organizer. What else do I need to know?

Create a drafting outline on chart paper or a whiteboard using the bullets in the margin. Working off your prewriting chart, model how you would draft the informative text.
- When I write my first draft, I'll make sure I use facts and definitions that develop points about the topic. I will write an opening that introduces the topic. I think my opening will be: "Deserts can be difficult environments for many animals to live in."

Model drafting a text with a clear introduction of the topic. It should include facts and definitions that develop points. Think aloud as you write, paying close attention to your use of evidence to support your ideas.
- I like using the fact about camels storing fat in their humps. It supports the idea that animals that do live in the desert have to have special features and ways to survive in the difficult conditions.

INDEPENDENT WRITING
Students choose a topic for an informative text about animals and their environments.

DAY 8 REVISING
Display and review your informative draft from the previous session. Explain that revising gives writers an opportunity to improve their writing. Pay close attention to the use of collective nouns. Point out spelling errors and lead students to generalize learned spelling patterns. Review your first draft of the text with students.
- I use the revising step to improve my draft. I do this by reading it aloud to see if all the facts and definitions develop points about the topic. I noticed when I wrote about a group of camels, I used the word that describes a group of camels, herd. My sentence was "A herd of camels can travel a long way in a desert because they store fat in their humps."
  Herd is an interesting word that we should keep in mind. I also noticed when I read the draft aloud that we should check the spelling of lite. Notice that it follows the same spelling pattern as the word night. Let's change it to light.

Share with students the places in the text that need revising.
- I'm not sure I gave enough explanation as to why animals stay underground in a desert. I'm going to look back at the information on page 8 of "Desert Living" to review the facts. What do you think? Should I add information to make my message clearer?
  You could say that they stay underground during the heat of the day.

INDEPENDENT WRITING
Students plan their own informative texts.

DAY 9 EDITING
Explain that the editing step is the writer's last opportunity to be sure the text is correct in every detail. Review the editing tips at right. Then model the process of editing the text.
- When I edit, I read through my text a few times. Each time I think about a different feature. For example, this time I'm looking for spelling errors. I check to make sure I'm using correct spelling patterns. Then I read it again and think about grammar, punctuation, and capitalization. Next I check my paragraphs. Then I read it again. The editing tips are helpful reminders. There's a lot to think about when editing.

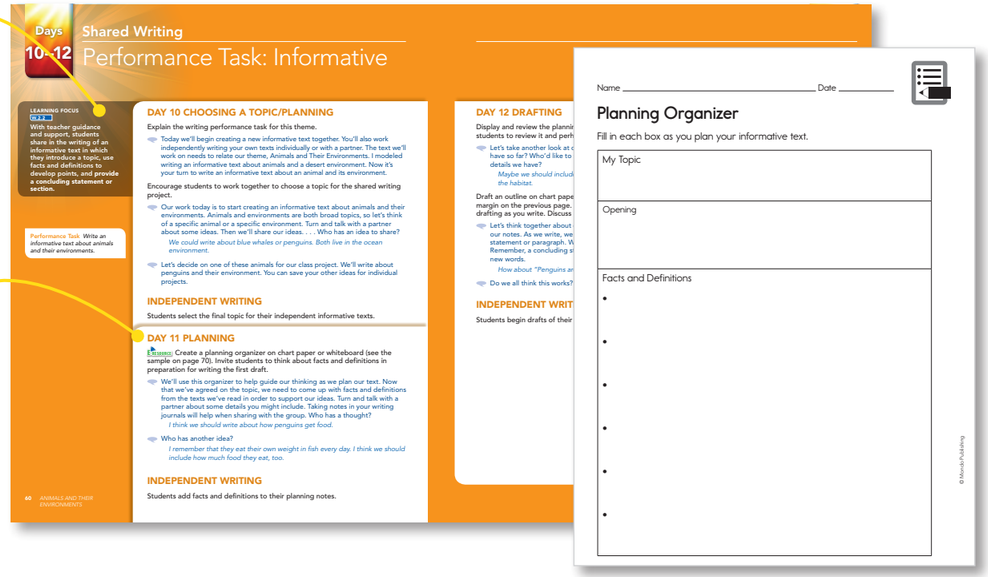
INDEPENDENT WRITING
Students share and compare their topic ideas with their classmates.

EDITING TIPS
1. Reread to be sure your message is clear.
2. Use proofreading marks where you need to make corrections or changes.
3. Check your conventions (spelling, grammar, punctuation, capitalization).
4. Check your paragraphing.
5. Reread once more.

Shared Writing

Teachers support students as they apply the same learning focuses and thought processes as demonstrated during modeled writing

Sample teacher language and a linked graphic organizer support teachers and students as they plan and draft their jointly constructed text.



Days 10–12
Shared Writing
Performance Task: Informative

LEARNING FOCUS
W.2.5, W.2.8
With teacher guidance and support, students share in the writing of an informative text in which they introduce a topic, use facts and definitions to develop points, and provide a concluding statement or section.

Performance Task: Write an informative text about animals and their environments.

DAY 10 CHOOSING A TOPIC/PLANNING
Explain the writing performance task for this theme.
- Today we'll begin creating a new informative text together. You'll also work independently writing your own texts individually or with a partner. The text we'll work on needs to relate our theme, Animals and Their Environments. I modeled writing an informative text about animals and a desert environment. Now it's your turn to write an informative text about an animal and its environment.

Encourage students to work together to choose a topic for the shared writing project.
- Our work today is to start creating an informative text about animals and their environments. Animals and environments are both broad topics, so let's think of a specific animal or a specific environment. Turn and talk with a partner about some ideas. Then we'll share our ideas. . . . Who has an idea to share?
  We could write about blue whales or penguins. Both live in the ocean environment.
- Let's decide on one of these animals for our class project. We'll write about penguins and their environment. You can save your other ideas for individual projects.

INDEPENDENT WRITING
Students select the final topic for their independent informative texts.

DAY 11 PLANNING
Create a planning organizer on chart paper or whiteboard (see the sample on page 70). Invite students to think about facts and definitions in preparation for writing the first draft.
- We'll use this organizer to help guide our thinking as we plan our text. Now that we've agreed on the topic, we need to come up with facts and definitions from the texts we've read in order to support our ideas. Turn and talk with a partner about some details you might include. Taking notes in your writing journals will help when sharing with the group. Who has a thought?
  I think we should write about how penguins get food.
- Who has another idea?
  I remember that they eat their own weight in fish every day. I think we should include how much food they eat, too.

INDEPENDENT WRITING
Students add facts and definitions to their planning notes.

DAY 13 REVISING
Display the students' draft. Remind students that revising gives them an opportunity to improve their writing. Read aloud the first draft of the informative text with the students.
- The revising step of the writing process gives us a chance to improve our writing. Remember how I read my text aloud to see if it was clear and made sense? Let's read our draft aloud together. Raise your hand if you find a place where you think a change is needed, and I'll mark it with a sticky note.

Review with students the places in the text that were marked for revising. Guide students to notice anything that has not been described in enough detail to be understandable. Work with students to make appropriate revisions.
- Let's have a look at the places you asked me to flag for revising. Someone asked me to mark this sentence: Penguins look funny when they run on land. Please tell us why you think we should revise it.
  It doesn't really tell any facts about how they run. It just tells an opinion.
- Let's add some details that will clarify what's going on here. What shall we say?
  Penguins spread their flippers behind them when they run on land. This might look funny, but it helps them stay balanced.

Help students craft a strong concluding statement for their informative text.
- Several of you didn't think we had a strong, satisfying ending here, and I agree. Our closing statement does not tell the topic of our text. What would be a good concluding statement?
  How about, "Penguins are well suited to an ocean environment because they move better in water than on land."

INDEPENDENT WRITING
Students revise their drafts of informative texts.

DAY 14 EDITING
Remind students that the editing step is their last opportunity to make sure the text is correct in every detail. Check for the use of collective nouns and correct spelling. Chart the editing pointers in the margin for students to use as they edit their draft together.
- The editing step of the writing process is our last chance to make sure our text is in perfect shape. There are many aspects of the text that we need to think about as we reread and edit. Each time we read it, we will think about a different writing convention. First let's look at our word choice. Here it says, "bunch of penguins." What is a better word to describe a number of penguins?
  A "group of penguins" sounds better.
- Let's change the text to say "group of penguins." Next let's check spelling. What is the spelling pattern for the sound /oi/, as in toy or coin?
  oy or oi
- Let's correct the spelling of noisy to be noisy.

INDEPENDENT WRITING
Students edit their independent informative texts using the editing pointers.

DAY 15 PUBLISHING AND PRESENTATION
Encourage students to share and present the final group text as well as the informative text they created individually or with partners. Celebrate their writing accomplishments.

We'll start with a presentation of our class informative text. Then you will have an opportunity to share your text with the class. As we listen, think about our theme, Animals and Their Environments, and how everyone's texts relate to that theme. We can have an interesting discussion about the animals and environments using all of our written pieces.

EDITING TIPS
- Reread to be sure your message is clear.
- Use proofreading marks where you need to make corrections or changes.
- Check your conventions (spelling, grammar, punctuation, capitalization).
- Check your paragraphing.
- Reread once more.

PUBLISHING & PRESENTATION TIPS
W.2.6, SL.2.4, SL.2.5, SL.2.6
1. Use a variety of digital tools, including a word processing program, so others can read your text easily.
2. Use relevant facts and descriptive details in your text.
3. Add audio recordings, drawings, or other visuals to add details to your text.
4. Speak in a clear, loud voice and in complete sentences when presenting your text to others.

Through scaffolded practice, students revise, edit, and publish the group text culminating in a presentation and celebration of their writing accomplishments.

Research Projects

Themes 3, 6, 9, and 12

At every grade level, lesson plans for two informational and two literature-based research projects occur on Days 5-15.

Amazing Books Students Can Read and Want to Read

Your classroom becomes your students' bookshop, featuring a wide selection of increasingly challenging texts—50% informational and 50% literature—for independent and small group guided reading.

These engaging books vary in size, author, illustrator, genre, and culture. Meet all student needs by choosing from a range of leveled texts with accompanying lesson plans that link to whole group instructional focuses.

Includes 6 copies of each title

Classroom Management

Bookshop offers plenty of literacy activities for students to do.
See page 52.

E-RESOURCE

All books are available as interactive e-books.
Learn more on page 198.

Small group resources include InfoPairs and LitPairs 6-packs (Grades 1–5). Each book includes 18 paired texts. Each pair is connected by level and theme.

Students summarize and synthesize ideas as they access information and practice cross-text analysis with paired short texts.

21ST CENTURY LITERACY STANDARDS

90% (or greater) of guided reading texts fall within or above Common Core "stretch" Lexile bands for a reader's Lexile range.

The Flexibility You Expect to Meet the Needs of All Your Students

A wide range of leveled texts with accompanying lesson plans are linked to whole group learning focuses, allowing students to apply what they learned to new texts and topics.

21ST CENTURY LITERACY STANDARDS

Leveled texts are matched to whole group focuses for each theme.

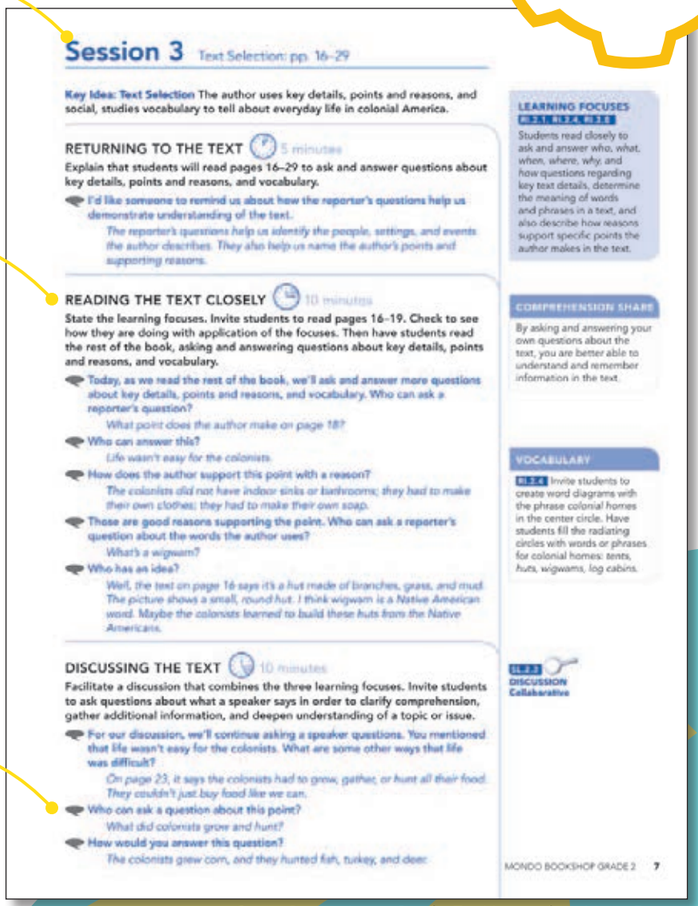
Lesson plans for each text include three small group sessions for students to apply and synthesize advancing literacy skills.

Lessons provide step-by-step instructional support that promotes deep analytical reading.

Close Reading

Each Guided Reading lesson in Grades 2+ includes teacher directions and a related blackline master to support students' independent close reading of the text.

Includes explicit teacher language to encourage rich text-based discussions.



Session 3 Text Selection: pp. 16–29

Key Idea: Text Selection The author uses key details, points and reasons, and social studies vocabulary to tell about everyday life in colonial America.

RETURNING TO THE TEXT 5 minutes

Explain that students will read pages 16–29 to ask and answer questions about key details, points and reasons, and vocabulary.

I'd like someone to remind us about how the reporter's questions help us demonstrate understanding of the text.

The reporter's questions help us identify the people, settings, and events the author describes. They also help us name the author's points and supporting reasons.

READING THE TEXT CLOSELY 10 minutes

State the learning focuses. Invite students to read pages 16–19. Check to see how they are doing with application of the focuses. Then have students read the rest of the book, asking and answering questions about key details, points and reasons, and vocabulary.

Today, as we read the rest of the book, we'll ask and answer more questions about key details, points and reasons, and vocabulary. Who can ask a reporter's question?

What point does the author make on page 18?

Who can answer this?

Life wasn't easy for the colonists.

How does the author support this point with a reason?

The colonists did not have indoor sinks or bathrooms; they had to make their own clothes; they had to make their own soap.

These are good reasons supporting the point. Who can ask a reporter's question about the words the author uses?

What's a wigwam?

Who has an idea?

Well, the text on page 16 says it's a hut made of branches, grass, and mud. The picture shows a small, round hut. I think wigwam is a Native American word. Maybe the colonists learned to build these huts from the Native Americans.

DISCUSSING THE TEXT 10 minutes

Facilitate a discussion that combines the three learning focuses. Invite students to ask questions about what a speaker says in order to clarify comprehension, gather additional information, and deepen understanding of a topic or issue.

For our discussion, we'll continue asking a speaker questions. You mentioned that life wasn't easy for the colonists. What are some other ways that life was difficult?

On page 23, it says the colonists had to grow, gather, or hunt all their food. They couldn't just buy food like we can.

Who can ask a question about this point?

What did colonists grow and hunt?

How would you answer this question?

The colonists grew corn, and they hunted fish, turkey, and deer.

LEARNING FOCUSES RI.2.1, RI.2.4, RI.2.5

Students read closely to ask and answer who, what, when, where, why, and how questions regarding key text details, determine the meaning of words and phrases in a text, and also describe how reasons support specific points the author makes in the text.

COMPREHENSION SHARE

By asking and answering your own questions about the text, you are better able to understand and remember information in the text.

VOCABULARY

RI.2.4 Invite students to create word diagrams with the phrase colonial homes in the center circle. Have students fill the radiating circles with words or phrases for colonial homes: tents, huts, wigwams, log cabins.

MONDO BOOKSHOP GRADE 2 7

Guided Reading Lesson Plan for The Mystery of the Jubilee Emerald

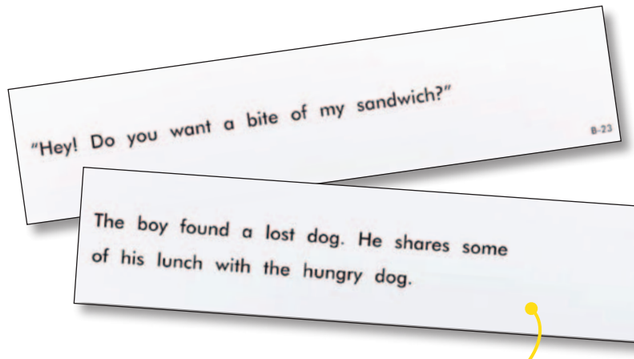
A Unique Resource to Build Oral Language and Improve Reading Comprehension

Oral language proficiency is strongly linked to reading comprehension and achievement. In Grades K–3, the Let's Talk About It! resource guides teachers to explicitly model, build, and scaffold the academic language structures many ELL and native English speakers need.

A lesson plan for each poster provides support for 10–15 minute sessions 2–3 times each week.



A double-sided text card accompanies each photo with a sentence of differing complexity on each side.

STUDENTS
RI.1.2: Identify the main topic and retell key details of a text.
RI.1.5: Know and use various text features (e.g., headings, tables of contents, glossaries, electronic menus, icons) to locate key facts or information in a text.
RI.1.7: Use the illustrations and details in a text to describe its key ideas.
Comments for Future Instruction:
PREVIEWING THE TEXT 5 minutes
Today's book is titled Penguins Are Waterbirds. Take a look at the author credit. Why is it unusual?
This book may be especially interesting because the authors were in first grade, too. Let's take a look at the back cover and read it together. . . . What are some of the things we'll learn about penguins?
Now let's flip to the Contents page at the front of the book and read it together. . . . What else will we learn about penguins?

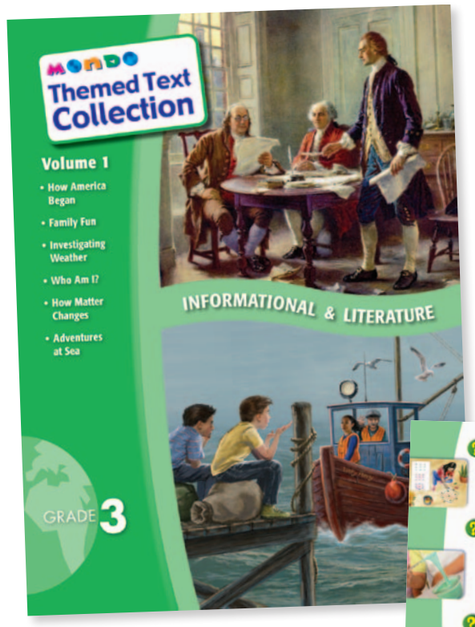
Teach Common Core State Standards in a Small Group Setting

Themed Text Collections offer a range of literature and informational themed texts with engaging content designed to elicit in-depth, collaborative discussion. Texts support close reading and synthesizing across complex texts.

Built on the Common Core



Grade 3, Volume 1

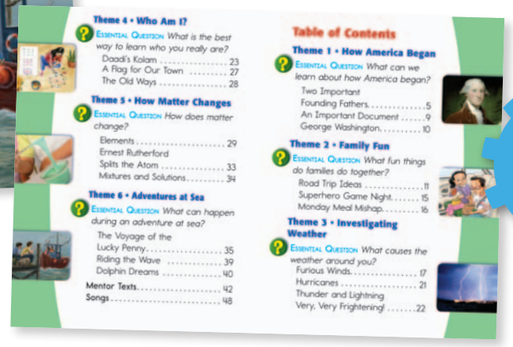


Table of Contents
Theme 1 • How America Began
Theme 2 • Family Fun
Theme 3 • Investigating Weather
Theme 4 • Who Am I?
Theme 5 • How Matter Changes
Theme 6 • Adventures at Sea

2 volumes per grade level available!

What's in each Themed Text Collection volume?

- 18 texts in total
- 6 themes: 3 literature, 3 informational
- 3 texts per theme: 1 extended text, 2 short texts
- Texts fall within expected grade-level Lexile bands

Only $57.50 for each kit!

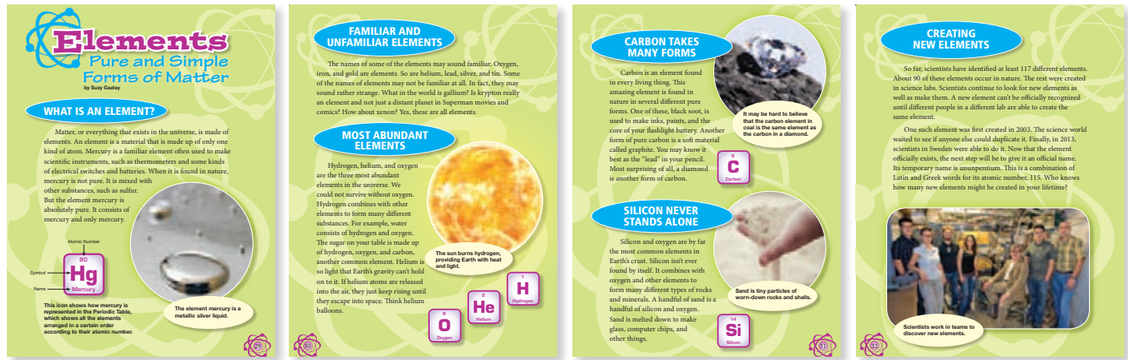
Each Themed Text Collection kit includes:

- Guided Reading Themed Text Collection 6-pack
- 6 Lesson Plans (1 per theme)

What's in each theme?

1 Extended Text (4 pages)

Each extended text includes numerous text features for readers to interpret in a range of text types. Students read closely, practicing explicit skills and forming new understandings through in-depth discussion in two Guided Reading sessions.



Use in Guided Reading Sessions 1 and 2

Grade 3, Volume 1
Theme: How Matter Changes

2 Short Texts (1 page each)

Short texts offer opportunities to synthesize information across texts and closely reread for deeper understanding.

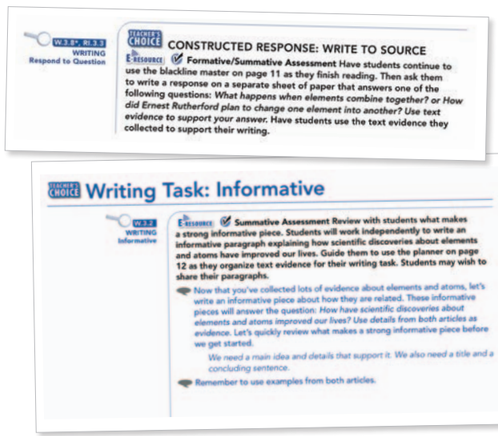
GUIDED READING

Lesson Plans

- Focus explicitly on Common Core standards
- Follow a clear and consistent structure for up to 4 Guided Reading sessions
- State the key idea of each text for teacher reference
- Provide text-dependent questions
- Include conversational prompts for teachers to follow
- Plans for each volume cover all informational and literature standards.

Lesson plans for each volume cover all informational and literature standards for each grade!



W.3.8* RI.3.3
WRITING
Respond to Question
TEACHER'S CHOICE
E-RESOURCE
CONSTRUCTED RESPONSE: WRITE TO SOURCE
Formative/Summative Assessment Have students continue to use the blackline master on page 11 as they finish reading. Then ask them to write a response on a separate sheet of paper that answers one of the following questions: What happens when elements combine together? or How did Ernest Rutherford plan to change one element into another? Use text evidence to support your answer. Have students use the text evidence they collected to support their writing.
Writing Task: Informative
W.3.2
WRITING
Informative
E-RESOURCE
Summative Assessment Review with students what makes a strong informative piece. Students will work independently to write an informative paragraph explaining how scientific discoveries about elements and atoms have improved our lives. Guide them to use the planner on page 12 as they organize text evidence for their writing task. Students may wish to share their paragraphs.
Now that you've collected lots of evidence about elements and atoms, let's write an informative piece about how they are related. These informative pieces will answer the question: How have scientific discoveries about elements and atoms improved our lives? Use details from both articles as evidence. Let's quickly review what makes a strong informative piece before we get started.
We need a main idea and details that support it. We also need a title and a concluding sentence.
Remember to use examples from both articles.

SCIENCE

1A You're Getting Warmer!
What is the sun?
The sun is a giant star.
It is the biggest star in our solar system.
What is the sun made of?
The sun is a big, hot ball of gas.
It is billions of years old.
What does the sun do?
The sun warms Earth's land, air, and water.
Nothing can live without the sun.
1B The Reasons for Seasons
Earth goes around the sun. The sun lights the earth.
I live in Ohio. This is how the sun lights my house all year.
Winter
My house tilts away from the sun.
We get less sunlight. Night is longer than day.
Spring
My house does not tilt away from the sun.
Day and night are about the same.
Summer
My house tilts toward the sun.
We get more sunlight.
Day is longer than night.
Fall
My house does not tilt toward the sun.
Day and night are about the same.

SOCIAL STUDIES

3A How to Make an Igloo
The Inuit lived in a cold land. For thousands of years, they built snow homes called igloos. The igloos kept them warm. Today, campers make igloos. The thick walls protect them from the cold. They stay cozy all night long.
What You Need
Long snow saw
Snow shovel
Waterproof gloves
What You Do
1. Pack snow together until it is hard.
2. Cut snow blocks with the saw.
3. Build the blocks into a dome shape.
4. Build the dome in layers. It should be tall enough to stand in.
5. Fill the spaces between the blocks with snow.
6. Smooth the walls.
7. Cut an entrance small enough to crawl through into one wall.
8. Cut a small hole in the roof.
3B FLOATING HOMES
Would you like to live on the water? Then move to Aberdeen. It is a fishing village on the Hong Kong coast. It is home to many houseboats. Some are called junks. They have sails. Some boats are sampans. They have flat bottoms and people row them with oars.
For thousands of years, villagers caught fish with large nets. They lived right where they worked—on the water. They shopped from floating stores on other people's boats.
If you visit Aberdeen, you can travel on a sampan. The boater will take you to islands. You can eat tasty food in floating restaurants. You can imagine what living on the water would be like.
Aberdeen is a village in Hong Kong, China. It is by the sea.

2A A Bear's Life
Carlos Suarez is a zookeeper. We spoke with him about black bears.
Carlos, is it true that not all black bears are black?
Yes. Some black bears are brown or gray. Others may have white patches.
What is a black bear cub like?
Tiny! A new cub weighs less than a can of soup. It can't see or do much. At first it just sleeps and eats.
What do the bears eat?
The cubs are born in winter. It is too cold for the mother. She can't go out to find food. She stays inside the den and her cubs drink her milk.
The mother doesn't eat anything all winter?
That's right. She ate a lot before it got cold. Now she doesn't eat or drink. She doesn't even go to the bathroom. All she does is sleep.
Wow. She must be really hungry when spring comes.
That's when the pigs out on berries. She also eats bees, fish, and other foods. Her cubs do the same. They will grow bigger, and in two years they will be ready to live on their own. Then they will have their own cubs.
BLACK BEAR FACTS
NUMBER OF CUBS - about 2–3 every two years
CATCHING - up to 25 years
2B THE LIFE CYCLE OF A PUMPKIN
Pumpkins can be round or tall. Sometimes they are small enough to hold in your hand. Other times they are too big to even fit through a door. Usually they're orange. Sometimes they're yellow and sometimes they are even blue! All pumpkins start out as seeds. Here is how a pumpkin grows.
1. Seed—A seed softens in the warm soil. Spring rains soften it even more. Roots push through a crack in the seed's coat and reach into the soil for food and water.
2. Seedling—Tiny leaves sprout and reach up for air and light. Air and light help the plant grow.
3. Vine—Prickly leaves and twisting vines grow. They creep across the ground and go in every direction.
4. Flower—A gold flower blossoms. Bees fly from flower to flower and leave pollen behind. The pollen fertilizes the flower. Now a pumpkin can grow!
5. Green Pumpkin—The flower wilts. A small green pumpkin takes its place. The pumpkin grows bigger and it begins to turn orange.
6. Pumpkin—It's full. The pumpkin turns bright orange. It is ready for harvest. Inside the pumpkin is slimy pulp. There is a handful of seeds. Save the seeds until spring. If you plant those seeds in the soil, the pumpkins begin again!

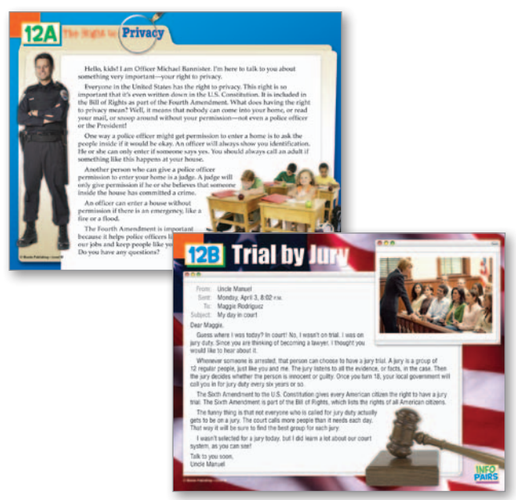
SOCIAL STUDIES



12A The Right to Privacy
Hello, kids! I am Officer Michael Bannister. I'm here to talk to you about something very important—your right to privacy.
Everyone in the United States has the right to privacy. This right is so important that it's even written down in the U.S. Constitution. It is included in the Bill of Rights as part of the Fourth Amendment. What does having the right to privacy mean? Well, it means that nobody can come into your home, or read your mail, or snoop around without your permission—not even a police officer or the President!
One way a police officer might get permission to enter a home is to ask the people inside if it would be okay. An officer will always show you identification. He or she can only enter if someone says yes. You should always call an adult if something like this happens at your house.
Another person who can give a police officer permission to enter your home is a judge. A judge will only give permission if he or she believes that someone inside the house has committed a crime.
An officer can enter a house without permission if there is an emergency, like a fire or a flood.
The Fourth Amendment is important because it helps police officers keep our jobs and keep people like you safe. Do you have any questions?
12B Trial by Jury
From: Uncle Manuel
Sent: Monday, April 3, 8:02 P.M.
To: Maggie Rodriguez
Subject: My day in court
Dear Maggie,
Guess where I was today? In court! No, I wasn't on trial. I was on jury duty. Since you are thinking of becoming a lawyer, I thought you would like to hear about it.
Whenever someone is arrested, that person can choose to have a jury trial. A jury is a group of 12 regular people, just like you and me. The jury listens to all the evidence, or facts, in the case. Then the jury decides whether the person is innocent or guilty. Once you turn 18, your local government will call you in for jury duty every six years or so.
The Sixth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution gives every American citizen the right to have a jury trial. The Sixth Amendment is part of the Bill of Rights, which lists the rights of all American citizens.
The funny thing is that not everyone who is called for jury duty actually gets to be on a jury. The court calls more people than it needs each day. That way it will be sure to find the best group for each jury.
I wasn't selected for a jury today, but I did learn a lot about our court system, as you can see!
Talk to you soon,
Uncle Manuel

Animal Adaptations
Written by Michelle Paul
There are many things people are good at – adapting to a changing environment is one of them. People can put on extra clothes if they get cold. People can use utensils to help them eat. People can use tools to help them build houses. People can travel in cars and buses to help them move from one place to another.

Porcupine Power Play
Written by Stephen Wilson
Illustrated by Helen Cowin
Patrick was so excited that he couldn't sit still. Today was his first day at Porcupine School. He had watched his older brother and sister start school a while ago. He had listened to the stories they had told when they got home about all the fun they were having – learning about new things, going on school trips, and hanging out at lunchtime. Patrick had waited impatiently for his turn to come.

Reading SAFARI™ Theme-Based Reading

Reading Safari offers students the opportunity to read and gather information on a particular theme through a variety of text selections while building comprehension and academic language.

Teacher notes included with each Reading Safari pack!

In addition to literature and informational selections, each Reading Safari magazine includes:

Changes, Changes, Changes
Written by Tracy Rader
One hundred million years ago,
We were and as we are now.
Many things happened over time
And our bodies changed somehow.
One hundred million years ago,
Our legs were short and shaggy.
Our bodies were squat and silky.
Our skin was smooth, not baggy.
We could roll do'nd ourselves.
Attackers would puncture our skin.
Our soft, round outer shell
Would let their teeth right in.
We had no place to run away.
Our bodies moved too slow.
We had to change our ways or else.
Our species would not grow.
Changes, changes, changes,
We had to change to stay alive.
Changes, changes, changes
We adapted to survive.
Over time we began to change.
Our legs grew sinewy and long.
Our bodies grew powerful and tough.
Our skin grew sturdy and strong.

Seth Learns to Adapt
Written by Robert Charles · Illustrated by Bruce Potter Setting
The African savanna
Scene 1
Narrator
Seth the sloth is dreaming of finding himself in a treeless environment and wondering how he is going to survive as a slow-moving creature in a land devoid of trees. He meets other animals living in the area and seeks advice on how to avoid becoming a predator's next meal.
Seth Sloth (muttering to himself)
This is nothing like home. The sun is very bright and the air is the driest I've ever encountered. There are only a few spindly trees. I need trees to survive. How am I ever going to avoid becoming a tasty morsel for some hungry carnivore?
Lilith Lizard
Hey, where did you come from? I don't think I've ever seen a sloth an astonishingly bizarre-looking creature as you around here before. And what a slow mover you are! I've seen worms wiggle faster than you.
Seth Sloth
I'm a three-toed sloth. I come from the Amazon rain forest, where I live in the trees. In fact, the only time I come down is to go to the bathroom and that happens only once a week. When you hang out in trees all day, there isn't much need to move fast.
Lilith Lizard
You'll have to learn how to move fast around here, or you will become a meal for a lion or hyena.
Seth Sloth
Lion! Hyena! They sound like fearsome creatures.
Lilith Lizard
They are – there aren't many trees on this savanna where you can hide from them. Another predator, the leopard, can climb trees.

Adaptation: Behavior
Some animals have special ways of behaving and acting. These forms of behavior help them keep safe and find food.
Bat
A bat makes a high-pitched sound to locate objects and prey. This sound is called echolocation. A bat makes these sounds when it is flying in dark caves so it does not hit any walls. The sound it makes bounces back from the walls. From the echoes, the bat can tell how close it is to the wall. A bat also uses echolocation to find insects at night.
Bear
A bear survives the cold winter months by going into a deep sleep. This is called hibernating. Its body temperature drops, and its heartbeat and breathing slow down. A bear lives off the fat that is stored in its body during hibernation.
Goose
A goose migrates before winter. This means it travels to another warmer place to breed and find food. As a group, geese travel long distances, so they fly in a V-shaped formation for safety. Geese return once the weather warms.
Opossum
To protect itself from predators, the opossum plays dead. It is thought that fear sets off a charge of chemicals that make its body completely still. Most predators will not eat animals that are already dead so the opossum remains safe. After a short time, the chemicals subside and the opossum can move again.
Skunk
A skunk sprays a bad smell to scare off predators. It has scent glands, which contain a yellowish, oily liquid. When threatened, a skunk can discharge a spray of this bad-smelling fluid as far as 13–16 feet (4–5 m) away.

Encyclofacts introduce students to reference materials on their instructional reading level. Students learn to read various visual literacy elements, including graphs, maps, charts, tables, photos, and diagrams.

Literature Books

Additional reading is offered through leveled literature books that link directly to magazine themes. Great for theme-based Guided Reading and theme-based independent learning.

STORIES TO TELL
Written by Stephen Williams
Illustrated by Dave Gunson
"It's poachers. They're some distance from here, but we're in danger," Lloyd announced unexpectedly. He had crept back to the group without anyone noticing. Harry jumped in fear when he heard Lloyd's voice and writhed on the ground.
"Get up, Harry, they're still far away," Lloyd said in exasperation. "But even so, we'll have to move fast. It's not only ourselves we have to think about. Our families and friends are all in danger. We have to save them. Any ideas?"
Lloyd eyeballed all the members of CAW but all he could read in their eyes was fear.

Oral language proficiency is the critical link to reading comprehension.

Research shows that a strong oral language foundation is critical to achieving literacy success. Many students have difficulty comprehending grade-level texts when text structures are beyond their academic language capacity. Let's Talk About It! has documented success in improving oral language and reading achievement.

Essential for:
- English-language learners
- Low-language native English speakers

Materials explicitly designed to develop oral language

A 5-minute assessment identifies oral language proficiency and possible risk of reading failure.

Small group oral language instruction/intervention 10–15 minutes, 2–3 times a week

Let's Talk About It! helps develop speaking and listening skills critical to Common Core rigor.

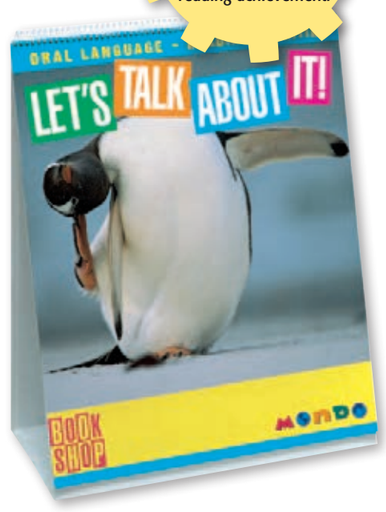
- Increase language and learning structures necessary for both reading comprehension and writing composition
- Extend complex academic language structures
- Enhance vocabulary and concept development
- Expand background knowledge and purposeful academic language

Instruction is easy to plan and implement.

- Small group instruction is provided for students with low oral language proficiency.
- 10–15 minutes of small group oral language instruction is implemented twice a week.
- Structured, focused instruction uses photos (visual stimuli) and detailed lesson plans to support language development.
- Explicit teaching focuses on syntax and complex structures of conventional academic English.

Let's Talk About It! has documented success in improving students oral language and reading achievement.

Each kit contains:



Guidebook for Instruction (online)

Lesson Plan Booklets (1 per photo)

Photo Chart

- Engaging photos are designed to elicit conversation among students.
- Students explore, talk about, and better understand the world around them.
- 48 photos fall into 3 categories: science, social studies, and a day in the life.

Science Grade 2

Text Cards

- Double-sided for each photo
- Sentences at two levels of difficulty with different sentence complexities
- Available in Spanish

Lesson Plans

- Lesson booklet for each enlarged photo
- Help build and scaffold language skills, structures, and vocabulary
- 4 sequential instructional sessions
  - › Session 1: Generating a Discussion
  - › Session 2: Recording Their Thoughts
  - › Session 3: Returning to Their Thoughts
  - › Session 4: Predicting, Reading, and Interpreting Text Cards

Oral Language Assessment

- Quick (5 minutes) and easy diagnostic tool
- Informs teachers of students' oral language needs (formative)
- Also ideal for reporting growth over time (summative)

A 5-minute assessment identifies oral language proficiency and possible risk of reading failure.

Systematic and Explicit Phonics Instruction Helps Pave the Way to Reading Success!

Bookshop Phonics provides explicit, sequential instruction and intervention for students in Kindergarten through Grade 2+. The ease of use, flexibility of planning, and continuous reinforcement of phonics skills enables students to make progress based on individual needs.

All materials support explicit instruction that targets skills in six early strands:

- Phonological awareness
- Phonemic awareness
- Letter recognition
- Phonics/word study
- Word recognition
- Fluency

Bookshop Phonics offers the following:

- Systematic research-based sequence of letter-sound introduction and decoding skills
- Consistent scope and sequence built on introduction-practice-mastery of each skill
- Clear methodology for both whole group and optional small group instruction
- Ongoing progress monitoring and assessment opportunities
- Works as a stand-alone program or as a companion to any core reading program

Component Overview

Each grade-level program includes:

The Body of a Bird
By Christine Mullahy
Bird Basics
What makes a bird a bird? Birds look different from other animals. Their bodies are specially made to do many interesting things. They fly, find food, build nests, and hatch eggs.
A bird is not a bird next to a person. Birds and people have some of the same body parts. They both have heads, eyes, and legs. But which body parts are different? Think of what you see when you look at a bird.

Pacing Chart sets out a progression of whole group reading sessions that allows teachers to either start at the beginning or choose targeted texts and lessons based on instructional needs.

Shared Reading Texts and Lesson Plans include multiple sessions for each text that support both rereading to deepen comprehension and scaffolded practice with targeted learning focuses.

Short Fiction and Nonfiction Text Passages for Comprehension Instruction

- Large, sturdy text posters support explicit teaching of comprehension strategies to develop critical, analytical readers.
- Teachers share, demonstrate, and scaffold student practice with a specific comprehension skill or strategy for each poster.
- Short fiction and nonfiction passages create a variety for students to read, think about, and discuss.

Short-text format supports deliberate comprehension instruction and text-dependent analysis.

Students learn and practice critical comprehension strategies:

- Making connections
- Synthesizing/summarizing
- Visualizing
- Making inferences
- Recognizing text structures
- Determining importance
- Answering and generating questions

Component Overview

Each Now I Get It! grade-level program includes:

16 Full-Color Anchor Text Posters 22" x 28"

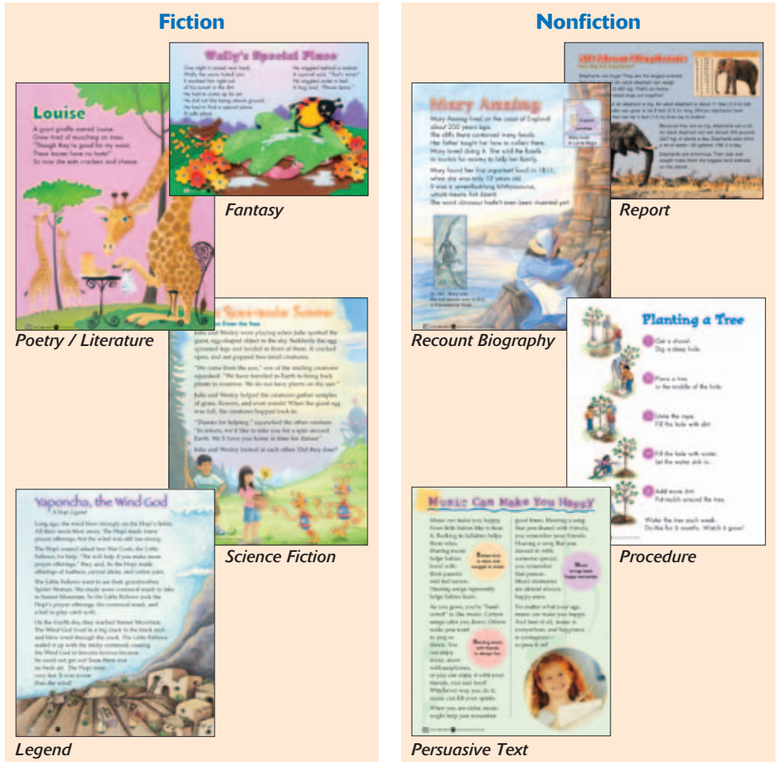
48-page Guidebook for Instruction

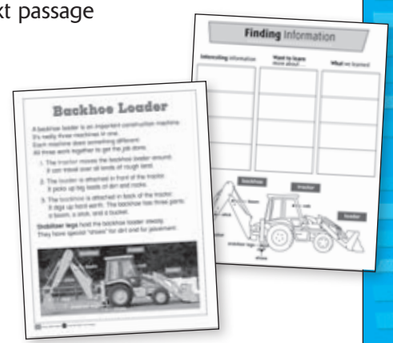
Anchor Text Poster

- Short-text format supports deliberate comprehension instruction and text-dependent analysis
- Texts divided evenly between fiction and nonfiction
- Large, sturdy text posters measure 22" x 28"
- Topics match national curriculum standards in science, social studies, and language arts.
- Fiction text types include personal recount, fantasy, folktales, fables, poetry, science fiction, and more.
- Non-fiction text types include reports, procedures, explanations, opinions, memoirs, biographies, and more.



Lesson Plans (2 sessions per anchor text poster)

- Target comprehension strategies for each anchor text passage
- Include reproducible masters of the text passage and comprehension organizers
- Feature teacher prompts for ease of use
- Provide additional support available for ELL, vocabulary, fluency, and more

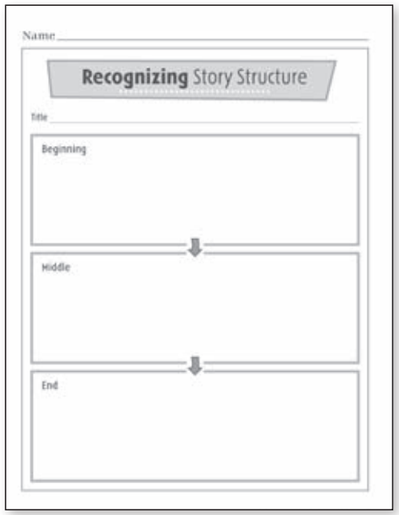


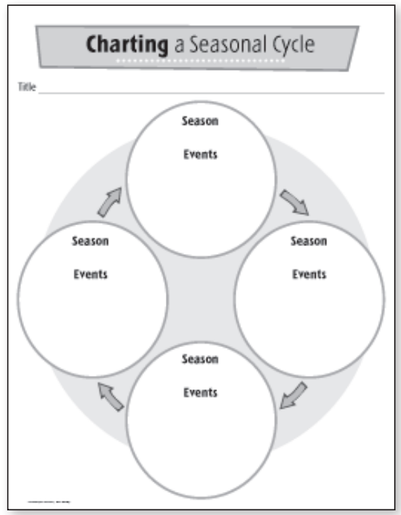
Reproducible masters of anchor text poster and comprehension poster

4-page Lesson Plan

Comprehension Graphic Organizers

- Support students to closely reread text, apply the target comprehension strategy, and collect text evidence
- Graphic organizers help students organize their thinking
- Large, sturdy write-on/wipe-off posters measure 22" x 28"





Comprehension strategies are taught through a variety of fiction and nonfiction text types.

Pathways to Writing

Teach Modeled and Shared Writing with Confidence!

Explicit, whole-class modeled and shared writing instruction helps you teach students the strategies needed to create texts in a variety of genre.

Pathways to Writing includes anchor texts and sets of writing process organizers for a range of text types. Available in large poster format (Grades K–3) and interactive whiteboard format (Grades 4–5).

Each of the 12 writing units includes two instructional pathways.

1 Modeled Writing: Explicitly teaches and practices a single step of the writing process through a specific text type.

Marsh Habitats
This wood duck lives in a marsh. The marsh is its habitat. A habitat provides food, water, shelter, and space. Everything the wood duck needs is found in its habitat.
The duck swims in the shallow water. It drinks the water and eats the grass that grows in the mud. food and water Tall grass and dead trees hide the duck and its nest. shelter They protect the duck from danger. There is plenty of space for the duck's nest and for other wood ducks, too. space

Fiction + Historical Fiction
Maple Sugaring Memories
Like most boys in the New England colonies, Henry had been looking forward to spring. Maple sugaring was hard work, but he loved camping out with his father and the other boys and fathers. The weather was just right—warm enough to make the sap run, but still cool at night.
Early evenings they'd all sit around the fire, telling stories of trapping and hunting, wolverines and wildcats. Henry was always sure he'd wake up to find a wildcat's glowing eyes fixed on him in the middle of the night. The thought made him shiver—just a little.
"Look for a maple tree that stands alone. The sap is sweeter," instructed his father. And off they would go to find the perfect tree and make the perfect gouge so that the sap would run free and sweet. Henry had no way of knowing that this year's search would have to take place without his father.

El hogar de la nutria de río
Dónde viven las nutrias
El tipo de nutrias de río que viven en The Wild Center también viven en arroyos y lagos. Hacen sus hogares en troncos huecos y en madrigueras y casas hechas de lodo y palos.
Qué aspecto tienen las nutrias
Las nutrias de río tienen pies palmeados y colas fuertes que usan para nadar. Su pelaje es lustroso y marrón. Sus largos cuerpos musculosos son ideales para desplazarse por el hábitat acuático.
Qué les gusta hacer a las nutrias
A las nutrias les encanta jugar. Se deslizan y resbalan por el lodo y los bancos de nieve. También les gusta comer. Su comida favorita son los peces, los cangrejos de río, las serpientes, las ranas, los renacuajos, las salamandras y los insectos acuáticos. Todos estos se pueden encontrar en las áreas de humedales. A veces, las nutrias de río se alejan del agua para comer frutas y vegetales. Les gustan los arándanos silvestres e incluso el maíz de las mazorcas de los campos de los agricultores.
En el pasado, gran cantidad de humanos cazaban a las nutrias por su valiosa piel. Ahora no quedan demasiadas. Los científicos y otras personas trabajan para devolverlas a sus hogares ribereños.
Cuando los castores abandonan sus acogedoras casas, a las nutrias les gusta mudarse de inmediato.
4B
El bosque del búho moteado
Ju-ju-ju, Ju-ju-ju. Ese es el sonido del búho moteado del norte. Hay cada vez menos de estas aves porque estamos destruyendo su hábitat. En la actualidad, el búho moteado del norte es una especie en peligro de extinción.
Estos búhos necesitan espacio
Esta ave necesita mucho espacio y a ella le gusta anidar en árboles grandes. Es por eso que vive en bosques del noroeste de los Estados Unidos y de Canadá. Estos bosques tienen muchas coníferas antiguas y de gran tamaño. Las coníferas son árboles con acículas en lugar de hojas.
Por qué el búho está en peligro de extinción
Las personas cortan las coníferas y usan la madera para construir casas. La madera también se usa para fabricar papel. Los incendios forestales y otros desastres naturales también pueden destruir estos antiguos bosques.
Los búhos moteados del norte son depredadores, es decir, cazadores que comen ratones y otros animales del bosque. Los búhos moteados no migran al sur cuando hace frío como otras aves. Permanecen en sus hogares del bosque todo el invierno, si tienen un hogar.
Los grupos ambientalistas se han propuesto detener la tala de tantos árboles. Pero las personas que cuentan a las aves aún informan menores cantidades de búhos moteados. Los científicos están preocupados. ¿Durante cuánto tiempo más escucharemos el llamado del búho moteado?
La envergadura del búho moteado del norte es de aproximadamente 48 pulgadas.

Un pastel para mi amiga
Hoy es el cumpleaños de mi mejor amiga.
A ella le encantan las zanahorias.
Entonces le hice un pastel de zanahorias.
Primero, mezclé harina y azúcar.
Luego, agregué muchas zanahorias.
Mi mamá horneó el pastel en el horno.
Cuando estuvo listo, lo dejé que se enfriara.
Después, coloqué cuatro zanahorias sobre el pastel.
Lo llevé hasta el granero.
—¡Feliz cumpleaños, amiga!
¡Crac! A mi poni le gustó mucho su pastel.

Tortillas Voladoras
Mi papá me está ayudando a hacer panqueques para mamá. ¡Son su sorpresa de cumpleaños!
—A los panqueques también se los llama tortillas —dice papá.
Mi papá voltea un panqueque y este aterriza con un sonido seco.
Yo volteo mi panqueque. Fue un gran error.
Mi panqueque se desparrama por toda la sartén.
—Hice una tortilla desparramada —digo.
Papá me responde —No te preocupes. A mamá le encantará de todos modos.
Papá tenía razón. A mamá le gustan mis "tortillas desparramadas".
—¡Feliz cumpleaños, mamá!

Mi hermano, el robot
Mi hermano no se parece a ningún otro. Puede hablar cualquier idioma y creo que leyó todos los libros que existen. Es que mi hermano no es humano. Es un
No Humano Biónico, pero yo lo llamo MANO.
Al principio, MANO me ponía nervioso. Una vez le pregunté a mi mamá, —¿Yo y MANO podemos salir?
—Al pedir permiso, la forma correcta es "podemos salir MANO y yo" —dijo MANO.
—Qué sabelotodo —pensé. MANO podía hacer todo y sabía todo. Pero, ¿qué podía hacer yo?
Entonces, un día cuando caminábamos por el parque, le pregunté a MANO —¿Quieres jugar a atrapar la pelota?
—No soy bueno atrapando pelotas —dijo.
Sorprendido dije —Probemos con una fácil. Le arrojé a MANO la pelota de béisbol que tenía en el bolsillo y le rebotó en el pecho.
Después de eso, me fue más fácil que me cayera bien MANO. Hemos sido hermanos desde entonces.

Vecinos nuevos
Las personas se pusieron nerviosas cuando llegaron los extraterrestres. Las criaturas púrpura parecían amigables, pero no eran humanos.
Los Waterman vivían en una calle tranquila en una ciudad pequeña. Habían visto extraterrestres en la televisión y cuando aparecían, a Dinah Waterman le recorría un frío por la espalda.
—No te preocupes —había dicho el Sr. Waterman—. Nunca vendrán aquí.
Luego, un día una cúpula plateada apareció en la casa de al lado y se mudaron los extraterrestres.
Dinah estaba nerviosa pero quería ser una buena vecina; entonces, preparó lasaña y la llevó a sus vecinos.
Plixo abrió la puerta y se tragó la lasaña de un solo bocado, con cazuela y todo. Después, le dio comida a Dinah y esperó que esta la probara.
Dinah dudó pero luego dio un mordisco. Su cara se puso roja.
—¡Te engañé! —rió Plixo.
Dinah escupió la comida y se rió.
—¡Me engañaste! —aseguró.
Después de eso, Dinah y Plixo se hicieron amigos.
¡Pero Dinah tuvo cuidado con lo que comía!

Make Assessment and Planning Easy to Manage

DataZone's® online data management system is designed to support your day-to-day planning and recording of formative data, making differentiated instruction more manageable.

DataZone is Flexible

- DataZone offers many note-based reporting options for teachers, principals, and districts.
- Progress monitoring is efficient, mesureable, and able to be graphically tracked and reported.

RTI reports are manageable and accessible, facilitating assessment-driven instruction, screening, and diagnostics.

Manages Data Assessment Across Multiple Measures

The Class Data Summary uses Mondo assessment data (pre, mid, and post) to identify required instructional intensity and identify students at risk.

For more on Mondo's assessment battery, see pages 196–197.

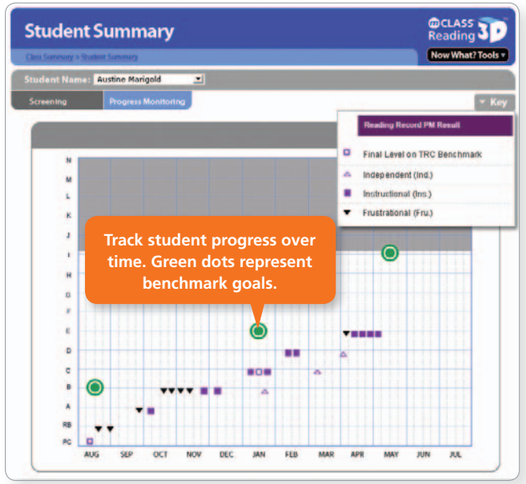
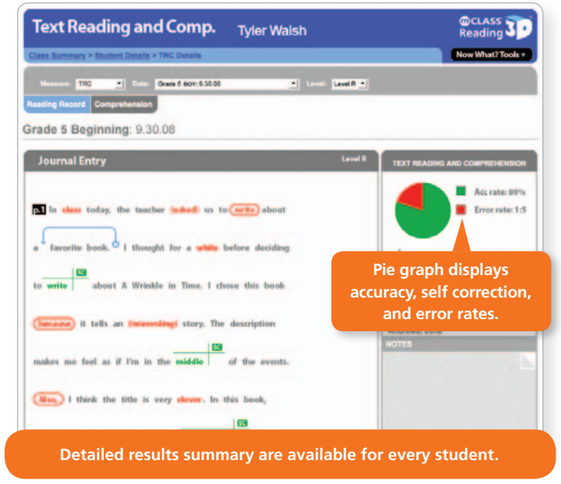
DATA MANAGEMENT

Access Mondo's Research-Based, High-Quality Bookshop Assessment on Mobile Devices!

Combining Text Reading and Comprehension (TRC) measures with the research-based DIBELS® assessment, educators can access a complete picture of student reading development in real time. Utilizing mobile devices and an online reporting platform, educators can view item-level response details, analyze trends in data, and appropriately evaluate and adjust instruction to meet students' needs.

As students read from actual texts, teachers follow along on the mobile device.





Detailed results summary are available for every student.

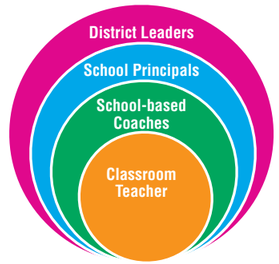
The Mondo Difference

Improvement in literacy practice is centered around the establishment of a shared vision of rigorous, student-centered instruction.

To this end, Mondo offers comprehensive professional learning through workshop experiences that include collaborative planning, observation, and reflection on live demonstration lessons with your students. This "classroom-out" approach accelerates and solidifies professional learning by linking theory with actual practice.



Mondo Professional Learning links continuous literacy improvement across all stakeholders. "Improving instruction from the classroom out!"

Professional Learning Workshops
(District team, principals, coaches, and lead teachers)

- Literacy leadership development
- Increasing instructional rigor
- Interpreting student assessment data to inform instruction
- Supporting increased comprehensive literacy in classrooms across the district

Job-Embedded Site Visits
(Site-based support for school staff)

- Developing school-based strategic plans
- Reflecting on and analyzing classroom and school data
- Developing and enhancing role of literacy coach/teacher leader
- Providing opportunities for modeled, shared, and observed lessons

Demonstration Lessons
(Critical component of all professional learning opportunities)

- Modeling instructional literacy strategies
- collaborative planning, observing, and reflecting on live demonstration lessons with students
- Demystifying theory by linking with live lesson study
